

THE CROWD OF spectators behind this wreck scene is not the normal one of curious thrill seekers which often gathers at the scene of accidents. Those in the crowd are participants who attended a two-day symposium on the care of the sick and injured.

Mock Wreck Staged At Red Cross Symposium

A mock wreck in the parking lot at the College of Southern Idaho ended a two-day Red Cross-South Central Idaho Medical Society symposium here in the emergency care of the sick and injured.

Idaho State Police directed the staging of the wreck and showed symposium participants how they operate in extreme emergency conditions. The accident, staged about 3:30 p.m., was one of several demonstrations given Saturday, the final day of the workshop.

The fictitious details of the accident were: A car pulled into the CSI parking lot at a high rate of speed and overturned. The driver, Doug Tremaine, College of Southern Idaho Police student, and one of his passengers were thrown from the vehicle. Two other passengers were trapped inside the vehicle. The two available doors would not open and officers were forced to break the windshield from the car to free the occupants. Meanwhile, Mr. Tremaine was causing trouble for officers as he acted out the part of a very intoxicated driver.

The three high school students in the accident were Mike Thompson, Robin Jackson and Mary Foss. All the victims were made up with putty, pieces of shattered glass, blood and other items. Mrs. Estella Aston played the part of an hysterical mother of one of the victims.

The state officers showed those attending the meeting just how each of these situations is handled. Frank Mogensen, officer in charge at the scene, called in additional police help and an ambulance was also dispatched to the scene.

Friday physicians from Magic Valley conducted workshops on 30 different subjects dealing with emergency situations ranging from poisoning to heart attacks to shock.

Injured in emergency situations. And, the wreck is not really a wreck. It was all staged by the Idaho State Police to show symposium participants how the patrolmen react in extreme emergency situations.

Allies Fire Across Border Of Cambodia

SAIGON (UPI) — Allied from Saigon, artillery batteries have been firing across the border into U.S. Marine 26th Regimental Landing Team sailed from California as part of the "Phase III" American troop withdrawals. Redeployment of American troops from Cambodian fighting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces in that country, authoritative military sources said Saturday.

The sources said the support shelling had occurred since the ouster of Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk from power Wednesday by forces demanding the withdrawal of at least 40,000 Communist troops reported inside Cambodia.

Inside South Vietnam, Saigon government Ranger and armored units killed 88 Communist soldiers in fighting in the Plain of Reeds west of Saigon, but the South Vietnamese took casualties of at least 22 dead and 14 wounded, allied military sources said. The fighting flared Friday near the district town of Tuven Binh, 66 miles

Troops May Take Over Task Of Mail Delivery

By UNITED PRESS

Postal workers defied the federal government and their own union leaders Saturday and continued their illegal coast-to-coast strike. President Nixon issued a veiled warning that he might call out troops Monday morning to get the mails through.

Mailmen's strike votes threatened to affect the entire 700,000-employee post office system, disrupting business, commerce and private lives by the beginning of the week.

In an impromptu White House news conference, Nixon refrained from mentioning Army and National Guard troops specifically, but he said he had "the means to deliver the mail and we will use those means."

The administration has been reluctant to use troops so far in the four-day-old walkout, but the refusal of the postal workers to abide by an agreement worked out by their leadership and the administration Friday left Nixon with little other recourse.

The President grimly told reporters, "On Monday I will meet my constitutional obligations to see that the mails go through."

The President said the postal will discussions will be held with workers in many areas have legitimate grievances and "we are out on illegal strike." The postal workers maintain they will not go back to work

"But under no circumstances will discussions be held with workers in many areas have legitimate grievances and "we are out on illegal strike." The postal workers maintain they will not go back to work until Nixon promises them higher pay in a long simmering and bitter dispute that has seen the mailmen promised pay increases that were later postponed.

American Party Group Vows To Renew Spirit

A dozen members of the American Independent Party, meeting Saturday in Twin Falls, discussed the lack of organization of the party and vowed to renew the spirit it possessed prior to the 1968 Presidential election.

State party chairman Paul Whaley, Twin Falls, said "we're still here. People just don't know it. We've had regular meetings and still have an organization but we're just not doing enough."

He said the party also has vowed to reestablish relationship with the press in the state, overcoming a partial severance created by some of the party members who have since been relieved of their positions.

"We will be issuing press releases from time to time," he said, "letting the people of the state know where we stand on certain issues."

The party set its convention for May 8 and 9 in Boise. Prior to that time a party candidate for governor will be selected.

"I have someone in mind, but I haven't visited with him," Mr. Whaley said.

Mr. Rutherford was thrown

Twin Falls.

Mrs. Belnap also is chairman of a women's committee which is being launched to begin fund raising activities in the state. "To be frank," Mr. Whaley said, "we are pretty poor at this point."

Man On Critical List After Crash

A Twin Falls man remains in critical condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital where he was taken by ambulance following a car-motorcycle collision in Twin Falls.

City Police officers said Damon Rutherford, 32, 418 Diamond St., received extensive injuries about 6 p.m. Friday when his motorcycle and a 1968 Volkswagen panel collided at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Caswell Avenue.

Driver of the Volkswagen was Richard F. Hunt, 38, Route 2, Kimberly. Officers said the Volkswagen was traveling north on Blue Lakes and the motorcycle was going south. Mr. Hunt apparently attempted to make a left turn onto Caswell, turning in front of the motorcycle.

Mr. Hunt was charged with failure to yield the right of way,

Address, Awards Feature Scouters Meet In T. F.

Six years from now the Boy Scouts of America will be six and a half million boys strong and growing.

Why six years from now?

"We've set 1976 as the goal, in line with the 200th anniversary of the forming of America," Alden G. Barber, the top Scout executive in America, told an audience at the Elks Club Friday night.

Right now there are about four and a half million Scouts in America and Mr. Barber wants to reach one in every three boys instead of one in every four, as is being done now.

"And we'll keep right on growing as time goes on," he said.

Mr. Barber came to Twin Falls to speak at the 45th annual Snake River Area Scout Council banquet and he spoke before a packed audience estimated at more than 500.

His talk was just one of the high points of the evening, with four Magic Valley men getting the Silver Beaver award, the top award an adult can get in Scouting, and another man getting the Distinguished Eagle Award, the first of its kind to be presented in this council.

Getting the Silver Beaver Awards were James Kinney, Twin Falls; Garth Eames, Acequia; John Adamson, Carey, and William Menendhall, Burley.

The awards are given for outstanding service to Scouting on the council level.

Dr. Vaughn Pond, chairman of the Silver Beaver committee, presented the top awards to the four men.

Getting the Distinguished Eagle Award was Frank Mogensen, a Scoutmaster for many years and a former Eagle Scout.

To be eligible for this award a man must have earned his Eagle Scout badge, then served in Scouting 25 years from that time.

New officers of the council were also installed, with Dr. Paul Heuston being installed for his third time as council president.

"This is a real honor," Dr. Heuston said, and Dari Gleed, council Scout executive, said, "Dr. Heuston has been a tremendous asset to this council and it is an honor to have him as our president for the third time in a row."

Other officers installed were Mr. Kinney, council commissioner; Gordon Beckstead, treasurer; and John Bertie, Twin Falls; Mr. Eames, Isaac Lee, Burley, and Jack Rice, Gooding, all vice presidents.

Installed as assistant council commissioners were John Doerr, Twin Falls, and Dan Maybee, Oakley.

Robert Day was chairman of the banquet.

Mr. Barber said the banquet was a success and said, "I'm no stranger to Idaho, although my headquarters are in North Brunswick, N.J. We have had two jamborees here and look forward to many more and I love this wonderful outdoor living you have in Idaho."

He said Scouts were fortunate to have the Idaho wilderness in which to grow, but said, "Scouting manages to complete its objectives without the outdoors in many cases. We teach citizenship and leadership and show a boy how to become a man and this can be taught in downtown Chicago as well as in the wilds of Idaho."

Nixon To Make Rights Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said today President Nixon would issue Sunday a 10,000-word "forthright and definite statement supporting action in the field of civil rights."

Scott told a convention of elected Republican Negro officials that the statement "will have a most favorable impact on those who share my views." Scott is a long time supporter of civil rights legislation.

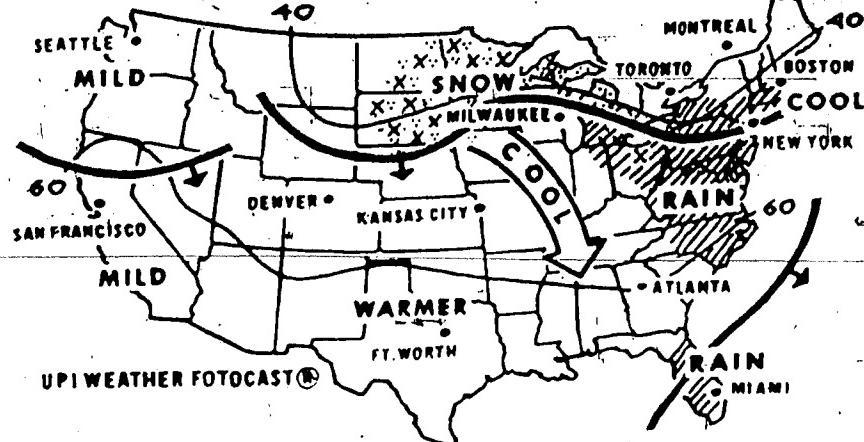

House Republican Leader Gerald Ford also predicted a "favorable response" to the statement.

THE TOP BOY SCOUT executive in America is Alden Barber, right, seen here talking with Dari Gleed, Scout executive for the Snake River Area Scout Council. Mr. Barber was in Twin Falls Friday to speak at the 45th annual council banquet. The top executive, who took over in 1967, said he spends about 50 per cent of his time travelling. He spoke at the Elks Lodge and outlined the "Boy Power '76" program, which is a recruiting program to bring the Boy Scouts up to the six and a half million mark by 1976.

The Poor Walrus

You can read about the walrus in one of Kipling's animal stories or in Lewis Carroll's poem about the two-trustful oysters. If you prefer facts to fancy, you can turn to books of natural history.

But your chances of ever seeing a real flesh-and-blubber walrus are diminishing.

If the walrus passes from the scene, he will probably have company. Other arctic animals are also in danger, including the polar bear and the reindeer, and the rare hooded seal. The Eskimos hunt them, but there aren't enough Eskimos to exterminate them without the kind of wanton slaughter of which no Eskimo would be guilty.

The Eskimos will be headed for trouble if the creatures from which they get much of their meat, milk, blubber and clothing vanish.

Bombing Threats

A rash of bombings in New York and Maryland in recent days, at the cost of several lives and undetermined property damage, are among the most dramatic and destructive acts of terrorists, but they are only the latest of a long string of explosive and incendiary devices which have been set off in major cities in various parts of the nation in recent years.

Bombings are accelerating in numbers and destructiveness. San Francisco has counted 62 bombings in the last year, with an increase in frequency recently. Seattle has been the scene of 32 bombings in the same period, two-thirds of them in the last four months.

Law enforcement officials understandably are worried about this latest tactic of revolutionists.

most of them apparently members of the New Left. But so far convictions have been greatly outdistanced by the incidents.

What can be done to stop these acts before they increase further, and perhaps begin taking a heavier toll in lives?

There is some activity in Congress to pass more severe legislation concerning transportation of explosives across state lines. This objective should be pursued vigorously. State legislatures can help by increasing penalties, and the courts by handing down maximum penalties for convictions.

At all levels, the time for cracking down on bombings is now, not after a major disaster has taken the lives of innocent citizens.

MR. SPECTATOR

The Age Of Voting?

The Senate has opened the door at least halfway to admit some 13 million Americans between the ages of 18 and 21 into the electoral process.

By a vote of 64 to 17, it approved an amendment to its renewal of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, establishing a minimum voting age of 18 in all elections beginning in 1971.

The legislation now goes to the House, where the fate of the amendment is in doubt. In that chamber its strongest opponent is Rep. Emanuel Celler, Democrat from Brooklyn, N.Y., and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

There may be some good reasons for being against giving the vote to 18-year-olds but the congressman invoked some rather curious ones when interviewed following the Senate's action.

Youths of 18 are emotional, not given to logical thinking, easily swayed by demagogues, alleged Celler.

Why, the first thing Adolf Hitler did when he came to power was to lower the voting age to 18. It was also the first thing Joseph Stalin and Benito Mussolini did. Young people were the most ardent supporters of these dictators, said Celler.

The fact is, the power of neither Hitler nor Stalin nor Mussolini ever rested on a decision by voters of any age, in any election.

What history does show is that susceptibility to demagoguery is not necessarily confined to any particular age group. Neither, as the 81-year-old congressman's reasoning suggests, is logical thinking necessarily improved with age.

SOS VIA PIGEON

A generation that yawns at live television broadcasts from the moon may find this a bit difficult to believe.

Back in the early 1920s (which was really not so long ago) before radios were common, carrier pigeons were taken aboard open cockpit airplanes and released with messages in cases of trouble, recalls the Bulletin of the U.S. Naval Oceanographic Office.

There were several rules pilots were to follow, including one that said pigeons were not to be released before 6 a.m. or after 6 p.m. unless the message to be delivered was of "very urgent nature."

There were also explicit instructions on how to write a message.

"All messages should be written on the form contained in the Pigeon Service Book furnished for that purpose, and should be written in all particulars as required by the form. The approximate place and distance and, if possible, latitude and longitude should be stated in the message. When completed, the message should be carefully folded and rolled so that it will fit in the message holder. It is then attached to the pigeon's leg."

The Bulletin suggests it may have been a bit difficult to comply with this regulation as a plane spiraled toward earth. But at least those early pilots didn't have to worry about how to spell "Havana."

SING A SONG

Music, which soothes the savage breast, is going to be employed in an attempt to calm Pakistan's spiraling population growth.

The nation's poets have been invited to compose songs and lyrics extolling the benefits of birth control, says Dr. Zarina F. Zalhoj, president of the Family Planning Association in Pakistan. Minstrels and street singers will then be hired to give the country's lagging family planning efforts a "lyrical lift."

It's only fitting. From time immemorial songsters in every culture have rhapsodized about love, which has the well-known effect of leading to marriage and the raising of children.

In Pakistan, at least, the time has come to pay the piper and to sing a different tune.

50-YEAR 'TRIAL' ENDS

Capital University in Columbus, Ohio, the oldest school founded by the American Lutheran Church, has announced the lifting of a 50-year-old regulation that kept female students on a "trial" basis — to the joy of 800 coeds currently attending the university.

One hopes the decision has not been too hasty.

ROBERT ALLEN AND JOHN GOLDSMITH

Pompidou And His Reviews

PARIS — President Georges Pompidou's recent trip to the United States is being assessed here as a modest success, but the visit has, in one respect, left a bit of an unpleasant aftertaste.

It arises from the French president's reported reference to Israel as a "racial and religious" state. Made in Chicago, the remark was all but buried at the time in accounts of the protest demonstrations which marred Pompidou's March 2 stopover there.

There has been rather widespread discussion of the comment, both public and private, recently, however. Shortly after Pompidou's return, the respected afternoon paper, Le Monde, took the President to task in an editorial titled, "Treading on Dangerous Ground."

A similar concern is still being voiced privately in diplomatic circles here. No one relay questions Pompidou's assertion, also made in Chicago, that, "I am not an anti-Semitic."

That is precisely why, in the view of some diplomats here, there is cause for concern and diplomatic malaise in such utterances by high public officials which can be read as suggesting the French policy has faint racial overtones.

It is true of course, that race and religion are involved in the Arab-Israeli war. However, as noted by Le Monde, it is essentially a political and military struggle. As the editorial said: "Politicians have a definite interest in restricting the struggle to this level as far as possible."

Generally, public reaction to President Pompidou's trip has been favorable, and it is clear that French officialdom, starting at the Elysee palace, has tried to put a good complexion on the visit ever since its conclusion.

For a couple of days last week Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann was even suggesting that the Pompidou-Nixon talks had moved the United States and Russia towards an understanding on the Middle East. Even if that proves to be an overstatement, it is symptomatic of the official view.

In diplomatic circles it is believed that the visit between the two Presidents was probably useful, even if it had no such world-shaking results. Pompidou, himself, told a television interviewer that he was "full satisfied" with his talks with Mr. Nixon. He said Franco-American friendship was reinforced by President Nixon's decision to go to New York and meet with Pompidou after the demonstrations in Chicago.

As to the demonstrations in Chicago, Pompidou criticized the "complicity of the authorities" there and, wrapping himself in the tricolor, described his reaction in terms which must have gladdened stout French hearts in cafes all over town:

"From that point on it wasn't Georges Pompidou who was concerned, but it was France. It was France which could be offended, and that's why I reacted in the name of and for the honor of France," he said.

Surprisingly, however, 39 per cent viewed the demonstrations as a "warning which the French government should take into account" in its formulation of foreign policies.

Pollution Control

Within 90 days President Nixon will decree that all new cars must be modified within four years. The 1975 models must reduce exhaust pollution by 33 per cent to 78 per cent. Tentative goals for 1980 are a mandatory reduction of emissions by 80 per cent to 99 per cent.

"The automobile," says the President, "is our worst polluter."

Seems it was after the President bought that California White House, downwind from Los Angeles, that he became acutely aware that Americans are already gasping for fresh air.

Whatever the inspiration, anxious ecologists welcome his concern and support.

But there remains one part of the pollution problem our national and state leaders are yet disinclined even to mention, much less to attack.

No, not industry. If politicians ever were intimidated by campaign contributions from industries, the problem has become more important than that.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, representing the mine-dominated state of Arizona, says most of these big smelters have refused to "stop smoking"; government is going to have to stop them, "even if it costs dollars, even if it costs jobs."

Similarly, California's Gov. Ronald Reagan is demanding mandatory curtailment of auto pollution, throttling of industrial smokestacks and a complete ban on all dump diminishing life-support resources.

With the fullest appreciation for all these efforts, I submit that most well-intentioned crusaders are seeking to reduce the effects of pollution while ignoring its principal cause: overpopulation.

Because the prerogatives of Church and State are likely to overlap in this area, politicians are understandably reluctant to discuss malignant population growth.

But each American who builds a house, garage and driveway destroys a sizable piece of potentially productive land. And the more affluent the country, the more land each man is likely to misuse or destroy.

Dr. Wayne Davis of the school of biological sciences at the University of Kentucky estimates that we are destroying our land at a rate of over a million acres a year. "We now have 2.6 agricultural acres per person. By 1975 this will become 2.2 acres. On any less than that men start going hungry."

Dr. Davis suggests that the most enlightened nations — the most developed nations — may thus be first to die. Underdeveloped nations will survive until their population growth makes famine and chaos inevitable.

Thus today's avant-garde ecologists conclude that the threat of environmental disaster is less a technical problem than it is a social problem.

The new crusaders for purification of our planet must now dare to consider some kind of limitation of its population.

Large families, applauded in agrarian days, will not be applauded in 1975.

Gal's Liberation

NEW YORK — One of the many revolutions that has to be dealt with this year is the Women's Liberation Movement. Some men are treating it as a joke, but many men are taking it seriously.

My friend Rowland said to me the other evening at a bar in New York City, "I don't know what to do."

"Why?" I asked.

"I love my wife, but I believe in the Women's Liberation Movement."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, the women are right. They say that marriage is wrong and that no woman should be tied to any one man."

"Is that what they say?"

"Of course, and if you see it from their point of view, why should only one woman have access to me, when there are so many others that are just as deserving?"

"Rowland," I said, "are you sure that the Women's Liberation Movement was formed to share the forces and will not hesitate to provide arms to friendly states as the need arises?"

The "need" has not yet arisen — finding reached after exhaustive studies and meetings by Presidential advisers headed by Dr. Henry Kissinger, White House national security aide, Under Secretary of State Elliot Richardson, and Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard. Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, also sat in on the half dozen or so top secret sessions.

"You're a true liberal, Rowdy," I said.

"I've become a realist," he said. "For years, like most married men, I was blinded to the oppression of women around me. I knew they were in chains, but I was afraid to speak up and to act on their behalf. I rationalized by saying, 'If I can keep my wife happy, I'm doing enough.' But I was living a lie. The only road to true equality is to make every woman happy, regardless of the sacrifices it entails."

"That's beautiful," I said.

"When women ask to be liberated," Rowland said, "they are asking to be treated as human beings, no more, no less.

They want dignity, understanding and someone who cares. If that demands a revolution, then I say I will become part of their revolution."

"You're not advocating violence are you?"

"I'm not for violence per se,"

Rowdy said. "But if a woman becomes violent over me, I'm not going to turn her over to the authorities."

"I should hope not," I said.

"How many women do you hope to liberate?"

"I'm not as young as I used to be," Rowland said, "but I'll liberate as many as the good Lord will let me."

"You're a saint, Rowland. A saint."

"I'm only doing what is right," he said modestly.

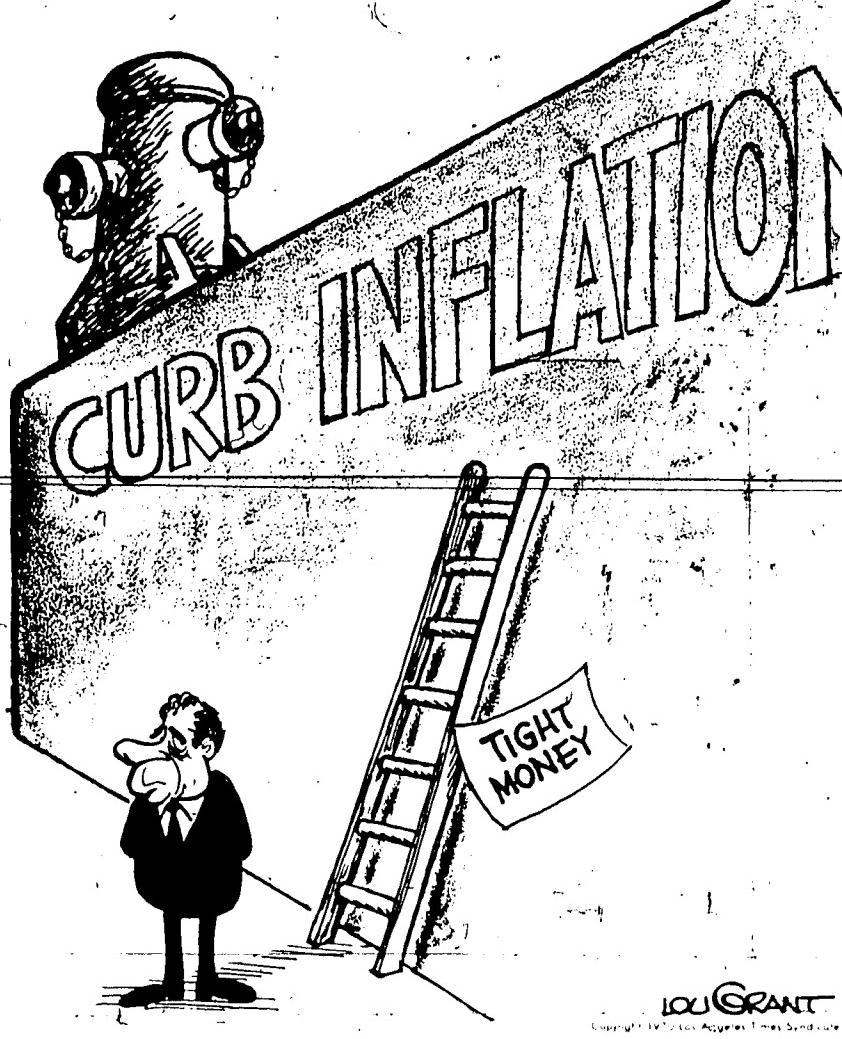

"There comes a time in a man's life when he must stand up and be counted."

"Have you discussed this with your wife?"

"That's what I've been trying to tell you. I'm staying in town by myself tonight."

"Daddy! Who is St. Patrick, and why are they demonstrating against him?"

analyze the present air strength of Israel and the Arab states and to project political reaction in the Arab states if Israel were sold all the aircraft requested.

On Israel's air strength, the Kissinger-Richardson-Packard task force decided that present deliveries to Israel of the F-4 Phantom, under former President Johnson's commitment to sell 50, are more than adequate to handle attrition of the Israeli force. These deliveries started last fall at the rate of about five a month and are on schedule.

Moreover, based on intelligence from the Soviet Union, this panel also ruled out any chance of Egypt receiving late-model Soviet MIG 23 fighters which are just starting in production and are earmarked for the Soviet Union's own squadrons.

What has held up the President's announcement is not the lack of decision. That was reached several days ago. The delay is a direct result of the difficulty faced inside the White House and State Department on how to draft the denial in terms least offensive to Prime Minister Golda Meir's government.

Almost as important to Presidential wordsmiths is the reaction among the powerful bloc of pro-Israeli voters in the U.S., who are led but not confined to the American Jewish community. Leading political figures within their pro-Israeli bloc are convinced that the wording of Mr. Nixon's decision is crucial to avoid a savage anti-Nixon reaction.

Barring some last-second change, the gist of what Mr. Nixon will say is this: he stands on the basic policy enunciated Jan. 25 that the U.S. is "maintaining a careful watch on the relative strength of the forces and will not hesitate to provide arms to friendly states as the need arises."

THESE ITEMS, OR ones like them, have all been passed off in Twin Falls as being the "real stuff." They have been represented as marijuana and speed, but actually range from catnip to common leaves to dog pills and a mixture of hair oil, water and food coloring.

Homemade Drugs Can Be Deadly Problem, Chief Says

Public awareness of the dangers of drugs and narcotics has increased sharply in the past few years, but the public still is largely unaware of the extreme danger to those would-be users who purchase bogus drugs.

Lt. Tim Qualls, chief of the detective division, Twin Falls Police Department, has released information on two such recent cases in Twin Falls.

He said two separate cases on the same night last month kept the entire detective division busy for six hours before it was found that the "drugs" were not actually narcotics.

One group of four young people had made a buy of what was alleged to be marijuana. The youths were taken into custody and a chemical check of the substance they were smoking revealed it to be catnip.

"I don't know if they got a kick out of it or not — they said they got high, but they thought they were smoking marijuana so it probably was partially psychological," Lt. Qualls said.

Public awareness of the danger of drugs and narcotics has increased sharply in the past few years, but the public still is largely unaware of the extreme danger to those would-be users who purchase bogus drugs.

Other substances which have been purchased locally and reputed to be marijuana include ground up chewing tobacco, flat leaf plants, tree leaves and alfalfa and other substances which are unknown but all have checked out to be non-narcotic.

This type of deception on the part of pushers is not in itself normally as dangerous to the user as marijuana. However, those who sell bogus substances to be either shot or dropped (taken orally) often present a real threat to users.

In the second case on that night last month another group of four local youths made a buy of what was passed off as "speed." This substance can be taken by either oral or intravenous methods.

The 18 pills, when submitted to a chemical test, were found to be prescription pills for dogs. The pills were to be taken by dogs with heart problems, Lt. Qualls said, and if taken orally, probably would have affected the pulse rate of the user.

If taken intravenously, however, the users could have become extremely ill, Lt. Qualls said that a properly administered dosage of good speed may not be as immediately harmful physically as an intravenous shot of a bogus drug. Many of the items being sold for speed could cause death if administered into the vein. Such a case was perhaps prevented in Twin Falls several months ago when Twin Falls Police confiscated a vial of liquid which its owner said was speed. The vial actually contained water, hair oil and food coloring — all highly dangerous if injected into the blood stream.

"Some of the stuff being sold locally as narcotics could cause sickness or death, but most is harmless," Lt. Qualls said. And, a good share of the sales made locally is not actually a narcotic, but could still fall in the youths involved have been contacted by the department.

Although Twin Falls city does not need to have secondary sewage treatment plant in operation until June, 1973, plans are already under way for meeting the state requirements.

A study of city and industrial wastes is being made by a consulting engineering firm and should be completed in preliminary stages this spring.

Mr. Milar said based on this study and recommendations of the consulting engineers the city will bring treatment facilities up to secondary standards for the capacity of city lines or combine city and industrial lines with assistance from local industries.

When the present primary treatment plant was built 10 years ago, the city knew it would within about a decade have to expand secondary standards.

As a result, Mr. Milar said, the city will be able to go ahead with this improvement without either additional bonding or higher sewer service charges to city residents.

City residents pay $2 per month for sewer services and have done so since the primary plant in Snake River Canyon just north of the city was completed. This not only pays off the bonds and covers maintenance and operation but it has been building up a reserve for the anticipated secondary treatment needs.

About 30 per cent of the total cost of the new facilities will be covered by federal funds. Bonds for the primary installation are now about one-half paid off with the bond issue a 20-year revenue program.

Like other cities and industries in the state Twin Falls was given a schedule several years ago by the state pollution control system.

Twin Falls is required under this schedule to have a survey completed by June of this year. In the first half of 1971 the city must have completed a detailed engineering report on the secondary treatment system.

Because it will not be necessary to call a bond election to raise local participating funds, the task will be much easier Mr. Milar said. He noted several communities in the state have recently turned down bond issues for sewerage treatment plants. The bond issue voted on 10 years ago for the primary plant passed by only nine votes Mr. Milar recalled.

By December, 1971, financing must be completed. The state will require by June, 1972, the city have construction plans ready and by the end of 1972 will require construction to begin.

By June, 1973, the secondary treatment facility must be completed and in operation. Mr. Milar said he feels the city will have no difficulty in meeting this schedule because of early planning for financing and the

Banquet Is First In New Hall

The Jaycees Distinguished Service Awards banquet will be the first to be held in the Twin Falls American Legion hall after an extensive remodeling program begun after the Jaycees took over operation of the facility earlier this year.

Doug Vollmer, manager of the hall said several thousand dollars worth of work has been done already and more will be completed by the time of the banquet, March 30.

An extensive cleanup campaign has taken place, Mr. Vollmer said, and hardwood floors have been sanded and resurfaced. Carpet also has been laid in hallways and the Legion Auxiliary room.

New draperies for the hall have been purchased and some paneling has been done.

Mr. Vollmer said a privately operated beer bar in the basement has been terminated and that room will again be available for private parties. No food will be served by the Jaycees, Mr. Vollmer said, but Leo Soran of the Depot Grill and the Turf Club has been engaged to cater meals for parties and banquets arranged through the management.

Israeli To Discuss Phantoms

The Israeli cabinet will meet Sunday in Jerusalem to discuss the delivery of Soviet missiles to Egypt and the expected U.S. rejection of more Phantom jets for Israel, diplomatic sources reported today in Jerusalem.

Reports of the Soviet Union is supplying Egypt with SAM3 missiles to combat Israel's low level air strikes deep inside Egypt are causing grave concern in the Jewish nation.

Reports of the missile deliveries along with Russian technicians to operate them were confirmed semi-officially in Cairo today with publication of the reports in the newspaper Al Ahram, considered the voice of the Egyptian government.

Diplomatic sources in Jerusalem said Israel is convinced U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers will announce Monday in Washington the United States will not at this time give Israel the 25 Phantoms and 85 Skyhawks it has requested.

The diplomatic sources said some Israeli government officials hoped the reports of the stepped up Soviet supplies to Egypt might cause the United States to re-evaluate the situation.

Portland Choir Sets Burley Concert

BURLEY—The forty-two voice Concert Choir, of Concordia Lutheran Junior College, Portland, Ore., will present a concert at 8 p.m. today at Zion Lutheran Church, 2411 Miller Ave., Burley.

The public is invited and a free-will offering will be received to help defray expenses, reports Rev. Donald Becker, pastor.

The Concordia Choir has sung throughout the Northwestern United States and British Columbia and is presenting concerts in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Utah during its 1970 spring tour.

The choir's program traditionally draws upon the rich musical tradition of the Lutheran Church as its foundation and is structured around the liturgical church year. A wide variety of styles representing the musical heritage of the entire Christian church completes the program.

Included in this diversified program are compositions by Thomas Tallis, Karl Graun, F. Mulus Christiansen, Martin Shaw, Jean Berger, and Joseph Gelineau, the latter composer's work being accompanied by guitar and string bass. The program will also include an arrangement of the Huron Indian carol: "Twas in the Moon of Wintertime" by the choir's director, Prof. Dale B. Fisk.

The director is a graduate of Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill., and holds the master of sacred music degree from Union Theological Seminary at Columbia University, New York City.

Prof. Fisk is in his fifth year as director of the Concordia Choir, having spent 1966-68 in New York, and is also Chairman of the Division of Fine Arts, Music at Concordia. He is a life member of the American Choral Director's Association.

"Pastoral Epistles"
The epistles in the New Testament known as the "Pastoral Epistles" are the first and second epistles to Timothy and the epistle to Titus, because they contain the advice of a pastor concerning church government, church officials, teachings and Christian faithfulness and endurance.

Migrant Laborer Risks Life And Saves Child

By CARR P. COLLINS
Dallas, Texas

Two days before Christmas, 1959, three-year-old Randy McKinley and his family were visiting his grandfather's farm in southern Texas. At 8:30 that morning Randy and other children were playing near an abandoned well which had been covered with a barrel.

Some of the children pushed aside the barrel, revealing a round hole that descended 300 feet into the earth. The well was cased with a 16-inch pipe. The water level was 68 feet below the ground.

Laughing and running about the yard, little Randy suddenly disappeared into the hole.

Horrified, the other children screamed for Randy's mother.

All she could see was the black opening. She threw herself down and reached into the well. All she could hear were pebbles bouncing off the pipe that lined the hole and echoing deep into the earth. In anguish she screamed Randy's name over and over.

Then, from the depths she heard a faint cry. She began screaming for help.

Manuel Corral, a 42-year-old migrant farm laborer from Mexico, was working nearby. He and three other "braceros" rushed to the well.

Although Corral could speak no English he quickly realized the desperateness of the situation and knew the child could last only minutes before he would vanish forever.

He instructed the other farm workers to tie a rope around his ankles. Corral then wiggled down the pipe headfirst.

Weighing only 125 pounds, Corral was 17 inches across the shoulders. The pipe's diameter was 16 inches. But the wiry farm worker was able to squirm into the opening. Though dizzy, and sickened by the stagnant air, he forced himself farther and farther down.

Twenty feet down the well branched in an inverted "Y." He shouted. All he heard was his own echo.

Corral chose one of the shafts and struggled downward. The rusty pipe tore away his shirt. He knew he could not stay conscious much longer in his inverted position. Only the thought of little Randy kept him inching down.

Above, a mother was praying, "God, keep him alive!"

One foot. Two... Suddenly he heard the sound of splashing water as debris from the pipe dropped downward. He paused — and heard a child gasping and choking.

Manuel wriggled down and soon his hand brushed a wet, tousled head. Randy was clinging to a narrow ledge just beneath the water line.

Locking his arms under Randy's armpits, Manuel cried, "Andale, andale, en el nombre de Dios andale!" ("Hurry, hurry, in the name of God, hurry!")

Strong arms pulled the rope; it cut into his ankles and stretched his legs. He was stuck in his upside-down position. He lost his grip, and the boy fell back into the water choking and screaming in terror.

Again Manuel reached and grabbed Randy, this time at the wrists, and cried "Andale, andale!" The rope tightened. He could feel the bones in his shoulders grating as his arms dislocated from their sockets. Twice he almost lost his grip.

Finally, friendly hands pulled him to the surface. "Thank God, thank God!" the young mother screamed as she pulled her cold, wet, but otherwise unharmed child to her breast.

Corral lay gasping on the sand. His clothes were almost torn from his body. His skin was a mass of cuts and scrapes. The back of his head was injured, and both shoulders were dislocated. His ankles and feet were so swollen he could not stand.

He shook his head to refuse the $100 that had been gathered from bystanders. The father of four children, Manuel later said he performed the rescue only because he would want someone to do the same for his children.

On March 17, 1960, the Texas Baptist Foundation honored Manuel at a banquet in Dallas; and as president of the foundation I was present to present an award to Manuel.

Listening to the toastmaster tell the story, I gained new insight into the essence of courage.

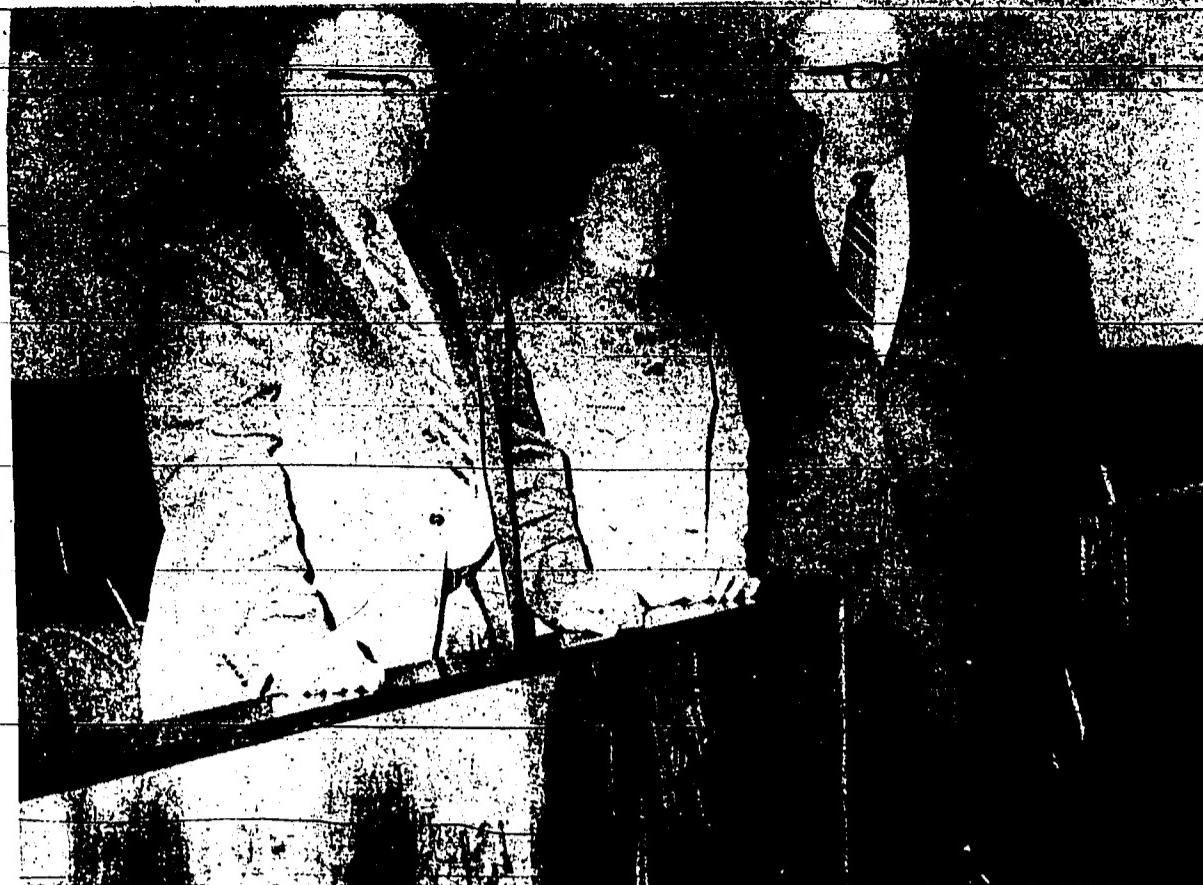

Most acts of heroism are done on impulse. But Manuel Corral had deliberately chosen to risk his own life. He had had time to think of what his death might mean to his own children and wife.

But putting aside selfishness, he gave himself completely to the need of another. Jesus expressed it this way: "No one takes my life away from me. I give it up of my own free will." That, to me, is courage of the highest order.

Next — Capt. Harry Davis, airline pilot, tells why he believes Divine Providence guided his actions when his airplane was hijacked.

Jack Murphy Will Go

Again For Same Post

BOISE (UPI) — Lieutenant Governor Jack Murphy announced his candidacy for re-election today to the office he termed the "trouble-shooter" for the state.

Murphy, a Republican, was first elected to the office in 1966, said he had pledged at that time to make the post a "working" office and added, "I feel that has been fulfilled."

"There are many things that have been accomplished. There are many things yet to be done for Idaho," Murphy said. "I feel I can serve the state's best interest in the capacity of lieutenant governor."

Murphy served 12 years in the Idaho legislature as a senator, acted as majority leader in 1961 and as president pro tem of the Senate in 1963 and 1966. As Lieutenant governor, he now acts as president of the Senate.

In June, 1969, Murphy was elected vice chairman for the western region at the National Lieutenant Governor's Conference in Denver.

Murphy said Gov. Don Samuelson had given him "another chore that he's like me to undertake. I'm not permitted to say what it is, but it's rather a Herculean effort."

Murphy said he believed the lieutenant governor could be helpful "from water pollution control all the way down." He has been instrumental in setting federal claims against the

Power Rate Hike Is Requested

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Company has filed with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission a new application for a cost of living increase in electric rates and said it is "essential to meet steadily rising costs."

The utility's original application was dismissed by the regulatory agency last week with the understanding that Idaho Power would file a new one containing information requested by the investigators.

Company President Albert Carlson said inflationary pressures on the utility have continued to increase.

"It is more important than ever that we be permitted to make a realistic adjustment in rates in order to cover our present costs of providing service and to attract additional capital for new facilities required by the growing needs of our customers," Carlson said.

Great Fund Goes To Young Man

MIAMI (UPI) — A young Miami man who suffered permanent brain damage in an automobile accident two years ago was awarded $2,250,000 in damages Friday, believed to be the largest individual personal injury award ever made in the United States.

Matthew Edmund Stahl, 21, the plaintiff, had asked for $4.6 million in damages from the Coca Cola Co. of Georgia, Morse Auto Rentals Inc. of Miami and Robert Leslie Jacobs, an electrical engineer for Coca Cola of Georgia.

Stahl's chief attorney, Murray Sams Jr. of Miami, turned down a $1 million settlement.

Stahl, a Miami Junior College student at the time of the accident on Jan. 25, 1968, was riding in a car in North Miami Beach when Jacobs ran a stop sign and hit the car Stahl was in.

The youth has been unable to communicate verbally since the accident, although doctors say the accident did not impair his intelligence.

Simplot Concern Is Involved In Suit

ELKO, Nev. (UPI) — A civil court action has been filed here claiming J. R. Simplot of Idaho is in default on $2 million worth of promissory notes in connection with the purchase of the PX Ranch in northern Elko County.

The action also asked that Fred B. Harris of Elko be appointed receiver for the property.

A petition for appointment of Harris as receiver was filed Thursday by attorneys representing the American National Insurance Co., which holds promissory notes amounting to $2,021,000, signed in 1963 and 1964 by the PX Ranch Co.

Simplot acquired the property subject to the notes and attendant deeds of trust on Jan. 2, 1969, from the PX Ranch.

At that time, Simplot also acquired livestock and equipment on the PX Ranch under separate contracts, and these items of property have since been liquidated, according to reports.

HEROIN SEIZED
TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI) — Uncut heroin worth $300,000 was seized at a narcotics checkpoint station about 70 miles east of here, federal judicial police reported Wednesday.

The 38 ounces of heroin was found in a suitcase aboard a Mexico City-to-Tijuana inter-state bus, said Chief Alberto Peral Orea.

There was no way to determine where the suitcase came aboard the bus or to whom it belongs, authorities said.

TOKYO (UPI) — Prince Sihanouk termed his ouster as the Cambodian chief of state illegal in a statement from Peking today. He challenged his opponents to call a national election to determine the wishes of the people.

In a statement carried by the New China News Agency (Hsinhua), Sihanouk proposed the election be supervised by the International Control Commission (ICC), made up of forces from India, Poland and Canada.

He warned all nations of "the unfortunate consequences that might arise" from recognition of the new regime. The United States and Japan, among others, have recognized the interim regime.

Reports of national unrest, he said, simply justified "the needs of personal ambitions and greed and those of the Central Intelligence Agency of the U.S.A."

Investment Of Funds Challenged In Suit

BOISE (UPI) — Public Instruction Supt. D. F. Engelking Friday challenged investment of Idaho's endowment funds in convertible debentures in a suit filed with the Supreme Court.

Engelking brought his legal action even as the endowment fund investment board discussed the possibility of dismissing First Security Bank as one of its three trustees.

First Security allegedly has challenged the authority of the investment board to invest endowment fund monies in convertible bonds and allegedly raised the question with Standard & Poor's, one of the board's four money managers.

Engelking told a reporter that the question raised by First Security and later by Standard & Poor's led to his decision to bring the legal action.

Decorations and programs were donated by Mrs. Sharon Walker.

Prince Is Concerned In Japan

Earlier, Engelking brought a similar action and the court held that certain portions of a law passed last year were in violation of the State Constitution. Interpretation of this opinion, however, differed between the bank and the investment board.

Wendell School Story Questioned In Letter

Editor, Times-News:

I am referring to an article in your March 12 paper headlines: "No Action Taken Over School Fuss" and I want to make some comments.

1. "Teacher allegedly taught a unit on family living." Wrong. Mrs. Green made birth control information available to high school students, thereby saying in effect go ahead and have sexual intercourse just make sure you don't get pregnant.

2. "Mrs. Robert Fisk, spokesman for the group." Wrong. Mrs. Robert Fisk wasn't even present at the meeting.

3. "Most of the parents attending the meeting did not have high school age children." Wrong. At least 80 per cent of the parents there did have children in high school, the rest of the parents there will have high school children in the future and had every right to be there.

4. "This material was received from the State Board of Education for a study unit in her sociology class." Wrong. The pamphlet was printed by the Department of Health and is intended only for people who are husband and wife.

5. "Many of the teachers attended the meeting to support Mrs. Green's teaching methods." Wrong. After two pep talks by two teachers who are leaving the teaching profession, only about one third of the teachers attended the meeting and then only to question the right of the school board to not offer these teachers another contract without hearing Mr. and Mrs. Green's side of the story.

6. "Contracts have been offered the teachers." Wrong again. The school board stuck with its previous decision not to offer these teachers a contract.

I very much question the integrity of your reporter and his source of information.

One Man, One Vote Concept Brings Opinion

Editor, Times-News:

The time has come when some of us are going to have to start thinking.

For instance, just what does "one man, one vote" mean?

In the water election here it's one vote for every 10 inches of water. Suppose a man has 10,000 inches of water? How many votes does that spell?

We only have so many natural resources in the country. How much is one person entitled to?

What about this subsidy racket? If a man receives more subsidy from Washington than he pays in taxes then should he have the same rights as other individuals who are raising the next generation besides carrying the load of all the taxes? There are many questions to be answered. If we don't answer them they will be answered with fire and bombs, death and confusion.

It would be well if some people read the story of the French revolution. Remember, ill fares the land with passing ill's a prey when wealth accumulates and men decay.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—At the tail end of major downturns the stock market tends to become oversold because negative elements that often have already spent themselves as long-term influences are overemphasized by investors, Speer & Staff says. "The specter of tight money" haunts Wall Street today as it did in 1966, but in the months ahead this fear should come to be recognized "as a ghostlike memory rather than a fact of life," the analyst says.

Currently some of the most depressed issues in the market are stocks of capital goods manufacturers and their suppliers, E. F. Hutton & Co. observes. The firm feels these issues have "speculative appeal" because "in past recessions their steep declines have usually been followed by an above-average recovery in market upturns."

Much potential good news, such as reduction in the Federal Funds rate and the Eurodollar rate and a substantial increase in the issuance of certificates of deposit, has already been reflected in the municipal bond market, Goodbody & Co. says. One year notes have already dropped substantially. The firm thinks it likely that yields on municipal bonds maturing beyond 10 years will increase as much as 25 basis points in the next few weeks, however, since there are insufficient funds to " sop up the supply" of these longer term bonds.

CSI Falls To Torrid Tyler 104-91

Eagles End Meet Eighth; Hegens On All-Star Team

By LARRY HOVEY

Times-News Sports Editor

HUTCHINSON — Freshman guard Steve Hegens, a Washington, D.C. product, was named to the all-tournament team Saturday although his College of Southern Idaho teammates fell 104-91 in the consolation finals by the Apaches of Tyler, Tex.

The Apaches, after a sluggish first four minutes, stunned the Eagles with fantastic outside shooting — with Larry Faust and Albert Lofton hitting tremendously well. The Apaches were particularly effective in the first four minutes of the second half as they hit eight of nine — all from 15-25 feet. That opened up an 18-point lead and although CSI cut the deficit to seven with five minutes left they were never able to really threaten again.

Faust, a 6-6 forward, hit 12 of 17, mostly off the right baseline in the 20-foot area. Lofton, a 6-8 240-pound center, was damaging around the bucket and out to 15 feet. Overall the Apaches hit 42 of 73 attempts against 36 of 67 for CSI.

Sophomore Al Davis, continuing his fine tournament showing, hit 22 points and wound up with 102 for his four outings. Hegens scored 21 and Ron Behagen added 18 to pace the Eagles.

The game was played over the first nine minutes when Lofton hit twice to blow Tyler into a 21-14 lead. Hegens, Davis and Tim Bassett brought the Eagles back to within two four minutes later but with 5:01 left in the half Faust and Lofton went on an eight-point surge that carried Tyler into its first 10-point lead.

The Eagles inched back to within five by halftime and stayed five-nine points back in the first two minutes of the second half. Then Faust and Jim Thomas started pulling Tyler away and with 10:21 remaining Tyler ran up an 81-66 lead.

The biggest Tyler lead came at 101-83, with the Eagles winding up with eight points in the final 70 seconds to close the gap.

The all-tournament team was largely a representation of the top 10 or 11 teams, with Hegens being joined in the top 10 by Jim Abernathy of Grand View, Iowa; Larry Brown, N.E. Oklahoma, who also won the sportsmanship trophy; Steve Davidson of Christian College of Dallas; Jerry Dunne of Vincennes; Jim Jenkins, North Dakota of Wahpeton; Andy

Knowles of Moberly; Bob Lackey of Casper; Larry Toros of Lake City; Bob Thompson of Tyler, and Knowles was given the most valuable player award for leading Moberly to second place.

Friday afternoon the Eagles put together another of their great halves, this time erasing a 14-point deficit and nipping Christian College of the Southwest of Dallas 101-95 in overtime.

Badly beaten on the backboard in the first half by an outstanding offensive team, the Eagles got a big defensive boost from Morris Moe and a great start from Ron Behagen as they overtook Dallas in the first 10 minutes.

Moe, making his second fine contribution to a victory, came in to guard Dallas' Ray Golson an outstanding 6-5 guard from N.Y. city. Golson had 21 at halftime and Moe was guarding on the outside for the first time this year. Moe also helped swing the battle of rebounds with his 6-5 height.

The Eagles managed an early 8-2 lead but Dallas caught up at 13-all and pulled away behind the shooting of Golson and the great inside play of 6-8 Steve Davidson. Davidson hit 12 points in the final seven minutes as Dallas mounted its 58-44 lead.

CSI's comeback started immediately in the second half with Steve Hegens hitting six points and Moe two. Then Behagen took over and hit 10 straight points, mostly on jumpers from around the free throw line to shove CSI in front 62-60.

Dallas steadied momentarily and in the next minute and seventeen seconds moved back on top by four. It stayed within a point or two over the next three minutes, with CSI playing a deliberate game and using great passing.

Behagen's feed to Davis tied it 73-73 and Behagen hit three points and Bassett one as the Eagles appeared to be starting a breakaway.

They moved to six points ahead and still had five with 2:03 left, when Golson hit a field goal. Moe got a free throw and with 1:24 left Golson hit again for Dallas, cutting CSI's lead to 83-81.

Dick Olsen of WSU also was a double winner in the hurdles with times of 53.3 seconds in the 440-yard intermediate and 14.7 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles. Olsen also anchored the WSU mile relay team which won in a time of 3:16.1.

Montana State's John Hayes beat the Cougars' highly-regarded distance runner, Ron Eklund, in the two-mile run with a time of 9:37.

EVASTERN Washington won two events with Curt Hisaw taking the pole vault by clearing 14 ft., 6 in. and Ed Fisher winning the long jump with a leap of 23 ft., 2 in.

The only other event not won by Washington State was the 440-yard relay, which Whitworth won in a time of 43.4 seconds after WSU was disqualified.

Idaho placed finishers in the top three in only two events. Jay Wheeler was third in the 120-yard high hurdles and the Idaho sprint medley placed third in that event.

College and our regional representative to the national association, said after the tournament Steve Hegens' nomination to the all-tournament team could very likely mean an all-American JC selection.

He added the JC all-stars which will be selected or announced later, may represent the U.S. in a tour of Europe this summer and Hegens chances to make this trip would not be hurt by the honors won in Hutchinson.

Bruins Defeat Four Squads In Second Meet Of Season

Sports
FROM ALL ANGLES

By LARRY HOVEY

Times-News Sports Editor HUTCHINSON — CSI's first appearance in a national junior college tournament would have to be considered a success, because although the Eagles placed eighth in the 16-team field they proved they could play on a national scale.

Also, the eighth-place finish increases by one their position in the final national rankings. There has been considerable discussion in Magic Valley over whether CSI is truly a fine basketball school or playing a weak schedule. We submit the results of this week indicate the local school takes a back seat to no one.

In viewing the 16-team field in Hutchinson, it is generally felt that CSI could have easily been in the top four and with any kind of tournament luck could have placed even higher.

The bracketing, which is set up a year in advance, proved detrimental to their chances but such things are uncontrollable and unpredictable.

Also, having three freshman starting certainly proved unsettling to the composure of the club, and this situation was not peculiar to CSI. In the first day, four of the teams that were regarded as likely contenders, fell to these jitters and it was basically the sophomore team that was successful in the partly going.

Albert Davis, who had an outstanding tournament, and was felt in the Idaho rooting contingent as a very probable all-tournament pick, did not get any individual award but he certainly caught the eye of many four-year schools.

The Chicago youngster estimates 30-40 coaches contacted him during this period and all promised follow-up discussions. Davis said he was most impressed with the University of Hawaii, New York University, Ohio University, Niagara, and Drake and Florida State.

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Vincennes, Ind., took first place in the National Junior College Basketball Championship Saturday night with a 85-67 victory over Moberly, Mo.

Lake City, Fla., earlier nabbed third place by beating Grandview, Iowa, 78-74.

Vincennes led Moberly 42-37 at the half and the Missouri team stayed in the game until 7:30 left to play when they trailed by only four, 57-61. Then, Vincennes exploded for 16 points during the next five minutes while Moberly could put in only two, leaving the score 77-59 with less than three minutes to play.

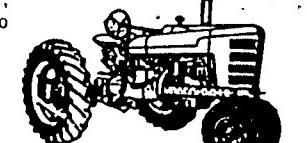

The onslaught was led by Robert McAdoo, who took game honors both in scoring with 27, and in rebounds with 14. His teammate, Roy Simpson, added 20. Andy Knowles put in 24 for Moberly and Dale Hasse had 14.

It was the second national crown for Vincennes, which won it in 1965. Moberly has been national champions four times.

In losing to Lake City, Grandview was relegated to

UCLA Takes Fourth Straight Title

*Bruins Erase Early Deficit
And Blitz Jacksonville In Second Half To Win 80-69*

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI)—UCLA's iron-man Bruins, after trailing by as much as nine points early, unleashed their fury in the second half Saturday to trounce fired-up Jacksonville, 80-69, and win an unprecedented fourth straight NCAA basketball championship.

The favored Bruins, proving once again that team play is the name of the game, put the

7-2 Giant Shut Off By Wicks

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI)—The winners and the losers both gave credit to Sidney Saturday after the UCLA Bruins rolled to an 80-69 victory over towering Jacksonville and won their fourth consecutive NCAA championship.

Winning coach John Wooden termed his team's defensive play the key factor in the victory, then singled out Sidney Wicks, his 6-8 junior forward, for special praise.

Wicks, named outstanding player in the tournament finals, checked Jacksonville's giant Artis Gilmore with 19 points and out-rebounded him although giving away six inches in height.

"Sidney didn't score much but he did an excellent job of working on Gilmore," Wooden told newsmen in the jubilant UCLA dressing room. "There isn't a player in the country I'd trade him for."

Losing coach Joe Williams also saw the Gilmore-Wicks battle as one of the reasons for his team's loss.

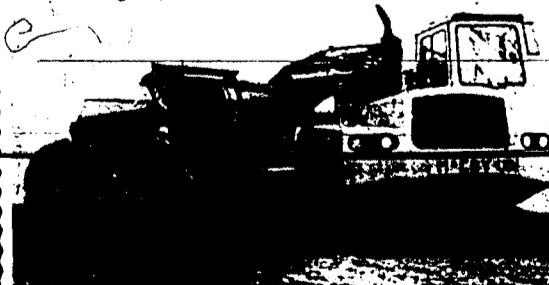

"Their ability to shut off Gilmore really hurt," he said. "That and cutting off our offensive rebounding. Wicks did a great job on Gilmore."

The Jacksonville coach also said that UCLA's experience under championship pressure was a key.

"We started off fast, too fast for our team," Williams said. "Usually we start a little slower. We just used up too much energy too fast. We didn't have enough left for the second half."

clamps on the gallant Dolphins during the first 10 minutes of the second half when the Florida team scored but four field goals.

Meanwhile, Sidney Wicks, Henry Bibby, John Valley, Steve Patterson, and Curtis Rowe began popping them in from long range and, with 12 minutes left, coach John Wooden's poised UCLA charges had a 55-44 lead.

For all practical purposes that was the ball game, as the Bruins coasted to the triumph before 14,300 at Cole Field House.

The 1970 championship gave the Bruins a record six NCAA basketball crowns.

The cool and confident Dolphins, who won the admiration of the fans for their audacity in dominating the contest for most of the first half, began to feel the pressure in the second half.

Both teams played erratically in the opening moments of the second half with 3:28 elapsing before either could get a field goal.

Then Wicks hit from the outside, Patterson followed with a jumper, Wicks added a field goal and a pair of free throws and Bibby scored from the corner to give UCLA a 50-40 bulge with 13:35 left.

The Dolphins, bidding for their first national championship, began to fall apart at the seams, missing shots and making bad passes and losing the ball.

With 1:50 remaining, Wooden made his first substitution of the game and UCLA fans began chanting "We're No. 1." The Bruins finished No. 2 in the United Press International basketball ratings.

Four Bruins hit in double figures with Rowe leading the way with 19, Patterson and Wicks had 17 apiece and Valley 15. Bibby contributed eight.

Artis Gilmore, Jacksonville's 7-foot-2 center with a 26 point average, finished with 19. Teammate Pembrook Burrows had 12 and Vaughan Wedeking 12.

The triumph was UCLA's 24th consecutive NCAA tournament victory in a string dating back to 1963. Jacksonville went into the game with a 101 point average. The Dolphins forced the Bruins into 14 turnovers in the first half but Gilmore's inability to hit more consistently prevented the fired-up Florida club from taking command.

Gilmore, even though he had 14 points in the first half, hit on only seven of 20 attempts while trying to work under the basket against Wicks.

The battling Bruins also compensated for their turnovers by outrebounding the nation's tallest club in the first half, 34-17, with Patterson and Wicks each getting 10 caroms.

Pressing Marquette Dumps St. John's For NIT Title

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pressing Marquette, harassing into St. John's into turnovers all over the court, utilized its sticky defense and Jeff Sewell's outside shooting to rout the Redmen, 65-53, Saturday in the finals of the 33rd National Invitation Tournament.

The loss spoiled the farewell to college coaching of St. John's coach Lou Carneseca, who will join the New York Nets next year, but his team refused to fold when it fell behind 29-14 in the first half and got the deficit down to five points with four minutes remaining.

But Sewell, who scored 22 points, hit a long jumper to put Marquette ahead by seven again at 56-49 and five straight free throws by Sewell, Joe Thomas and Dean Meminger gave the Warriors to a 61-49 lead with less than two minutes to go.

In the consolation game, Jim Oxley scored 28 points as Army downed Louisiana State, 75-68, to gain third place. Pete Marovich sat out the game in street clothes with an ailing ankle.

While Sewell's outside shooting kept the Warriors out in front in the second half, it was their devastating full-court press that forced five turnovers in the first five minutes and put them ahead to stay.

Dale Douglass Shoots 73 To Claim Third-Round Lead In Jacksonville Golf Tourney

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)

Thin-man Dale Douglass, who finally came into his own last year after a long dry spell on the pro golf tour, capitalized on his competitors' troubles with hard greens and wind Saturday to seize the third-round lead of the Greater Jacksonville Open.

Douglass, a 6-foot-2, 115-pound Oklahoman who won the Azalea and Kemper Opens last year and the Phoenix Open earlier this year, shot even par 73 Saturday. That was good for a 6-under-par 210 that gave him a two-stroke lead over four runners-up.

In that logjam at 212 were host pro Dan Sikes, who has played at the site of this $100,000 tournament more than any other touring pro and had a 71 Saturday; Dick Rhyun with a 71; Don Bies with a 72; and Lionel Hebert with a 71.

The second-round co-leaders, Lee Trevino and Bobby Mitchell, both skied to 4-over-par 76s Saturday to wind up at 213 along with Jack Nicklaus (72) Don January (70) and Dave Stockton (70).

Hebert blamed the wind for the exceptionally high rounds Saturday, saying it made it difficult to putt. But Homero Blancas, who had a 73-215 said he thought the real trouble was the extremely hard greens that made approach shots "bounce as high as basketballs."

Saturday's round drew a gallery of 15,000 but only a fraction of that number remained by time the leaders came in. Most deserted golf to rush to their television sets and radios for the Jacksonville University-UCLA NCAA national championship basketball game.

Douglass, a 34-year-old pro who didn't even start making expenses on the tour until 1968, started the day a stroke behind Trevino and Mitchell.

He was still in arrears after nine holes as the lead seesawed between a half dozen different golfers. But the field began falling back as the wind heightened and Douglass moved into the lead for keeps with three holes to play and then widened that lead with a birdie putt on the final green.

"Pete will go where the cash is," his father Press Maravich, the coach of the LSU team, said Saturday as LSU wound up its season with a 22-10 record by losing to Army, 75-62, in the National Invitation Tournament consolation game.

Pete sat out the game in street clothes after he aggravated an ankle injury in the club's 101-79 loss to Marquette Thursday night in the semifinals.

McGuire Proves Point To NCAÁ

NEW YORK (UPI)—Al McGuire, coach of Marquette University, may have wanted to take a dig at the NCAA Saturday, but he let the championship trophy of the 33rd annual National Invitation Basketball Tournament speak for him.

Boston Council Meets Monday To Find Stadium

BOSTON (UPI)—The City Council meets Monday to pick up the political hot potato of a stadium for the Boston Patriots.

The owners of the National Football League, before they ended their meeting in Honolulu Friday, recommended an extension of time for the "homeless" team to come up with a stadium. All NFL teams had been ordered to have a 50,000 seat stadium plan in the works by the end of that meeting or move the franchise.

A committee of three owners—Art Modell of Cleveland, Lamar Hunt of Kansas City and Charles Bidwell of St. Louis—talked to Pats president Billy Sullivan for hours reviewing the situation, then recommended an extension without a specific deadline.

McGuire, who brought his team to the NIT because he felt the NCAA tournament committee had underrated his squad by placing it in the Midwest bracket, proved his point to his satisfaction Saturday when his squad defeated St. John's, 65-53, to take the NIT crown.

"I think we are great, and we play defense," said all along that this was an underrated club. Just because we're not big. But we're quick and height doesn't make much difference to us.

Never once did we say we wouldn't win this tournament. "I don't know if the whole story about the NCAA ever came out. We wanted to go to Dayton and play in the Mideast regional. I just didn't want to go to Texas. I haven't bought any longhorns lately."

The NCAA committee, which selected Marquette as an at-large entry in its tournament, had placed the Warriors in the Midwest bracket because it rated Notre Dame and Jacksonville as superior teams. McGuire, however, thinks that is nonsense.

Don Lodbo scored three goals in the third period to carry Cornell to a 6-4 win over Clarkson and the NCAA hockey championship Saturday night.

Gulfstream Taken By Snow Sport

HALLENDALE, Fla. (UPI)—The Argentine horse Snow Sporting made a cross-country trip from California to the winning one Saturday by capturing the $123,600 Gulfstream Park handicap by two and one-half lengths.

Snow Sporting's convincing victory was in doubt a few minutes until the stewards rejected a claim of foul.

Twogundan, which went off a slight favorite of the crowd of 20,869, started his patented stretch run too late and finished second. Al Hattab was third another 2 1-2 lengths back.

Jockey Walter Blum on Al Hattab claimed that Snow Sporting blocked his bid on the rail during the long turn into the stretch, but the stewards refused to allow the claim.

Snow Sporting thus earned $83,600 for owner C. C. L. Hirsch, who imported him from Argentina to win the Charles Strub Handicap at Santa Anita, then flew the colt eastward to tackle the Florida handicap stars.

Twogundan, high weighted at 127 pounds and the pre-race favorite finished fifth in a field of nine horses. Beau Brummel was fourth.

Snow Sporting paid $14.20, $5.40 and $4.20 across the board. Twogundan paid $4 and $3 and Al Hattab was worth $4.80 for show.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The National Association of Basketball Coaches approved a resolution Saturday objecting to any tampering of undergraduate players by the pro teams.

Association President Adolph Rupp of Kentucky said the resolution was issued at the unanimous direction of the coaches' convention.

It said: "We call upon professional basketball to honor the traditional understanding not to tamper or negotiate with a college basketball player with college seasons of competition remaining."

Andretti Claims Sebring Race In Amazing Finish

SEBRING, Fla. (UPI)—Mario Andretti, his leading Ferrari collapsed with a broken gear box at the 11th hour, leaped into another of the blood red cars and charged back to win the 12 Hours of Sebring Saturday night, seconds ahead of a Porsche driven by actor Steve McQueen and cosmetics heir Peter Revson.

Royals Deny Charge Of Mafia Link

CINCINNATI (UPI)—Joe Axelson, general manager of the Cincinnati Royals, said Saturday there was "absolutely no truth" to a congressman's allegation that the Royals were owned by a firm with Mafia connections.

U.S. Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., said Emprise, Buffalo, N.Y., owned the Royals and also operated concessions at a large number of race tracks and professional football and baseball stadiums.

"They operate nominally as concessionaires at sports events and race tracks but have large holdings in bowling alleys, vending machines, drive-in theaters and airports, own the Cincinnati Royals and the Ice Capades," Steiger said.

Steiger said the firm was founded by Louis Jacobs who died in 1966. The congressman said a son, Jeremy Jacobs, 30, is now president and Max Jacobs, 32, is vice president.

Jeremy Jacobs is the majority stockholder in the Royals and Max Jacobs is chairman of the team's board of directors.

"There is absolutely no possible connection between the Royals and any crime syndicate," Axelson said. "There is absolutely no truth to it. The Jacobs have no connection with the Mafia."

Steiger said the firm controls or owns more than 450 separate corporate entities in at least 23 states, the District of Columbia, Canada, Puerto Rico and Britain.

On March 11, Steiger placed in the congressional record a list of the states and countries where he said Emprise operates at race tracks.

It includes:

Ohio—Thistledowns, Cranwood, Randall Park, Toledo and Akron (also hold controlling stock); concessions at Ascot Park and Maumee Downs.

Bullets Nip Warriors
By 127-123

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Earl Monroe dazzled the San Francisco Warriors with 40 points as the Baltimore Bullets ended their regular season on a winning note, 127-123, Saturday night.

Wes Unseld hauled in 27 rebounds, Jack Marin added 30 points as the Bullets beat the Warriors for the fifth time in six meetings. Monroe made 13 of 22 shots and exploded for 18 points in the third quarter.

The Warriors had a 32-28 first-period lead until Ray Scott's shooting sponsored a 60-58 Bullet halftime margin.

The Warriors pulled to within 124-121 with 52 seconds left but a Monroe jump shot with 27 seconds left gave the game Ron Williams led San Francisco with 26 points, one more than teammate Joe Ellis.

Germans And Poles Score First Points

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—East Germany and Poland scored their first points in the World Ice Hockey Championships Saturday playing a 2-2 draw.

The East Germans played well in the first period and took the lead through Ruediger Noack after 6:01.

In the middle period, the Poles came back and had during the first ten minutes of the period several chances to even the score but failed.

The East Germans made it 2-0 after 16:12 minutes when Helmut Novy slammed the puck behind Walery Kosyl, and at 17:22 Bogdan Migacz scored the first Polish goal.

It was the wildest finish in the 20 runnings of this oldest of U.S. endurance races. Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico and Jo Siffert in a factory Porsche 917 grabbed the lead at 10 p.m., an hour from the finish, when the Ferrari of Andretti and Arturo Merzario of Italy, leading nearly all day, quit with a broken gearbox.

Rodriguez, at the wheel, stretched his lead to a minute and a half over the dogged private 908 of McQueen and Revson, with Revson at the wheel. But 27 minutes from the finish, the gleaming German car broke a wheel bearing and fell back to finish fourth.

Merzario was at the wheel when the lead Ferrari broke and Andretti, in the pits, was rushed into the other remaining factory 512S, driven until then by Nino Vacarella and Ignazio Giunti of Italy, running fourth at that time.

An Alfa Romeo Spyder driven by Masten Gregory and Toine Hezemans of Holland took third. Fifth was a Matra driven by Henri Pescarolo and Johnny Servoz-Gavin of France.

Andretti's blasting charge through the last half hour beat Revson by 23 seconds. He came into the pits for fuel in the last lap but his crew frantically waved him back to the track.

The Alfa in third was three minutes more than a lap behind the first two cars. The limping Rodriguez Porsche, which lost 10 minutes and the race with the burned wheel bearing, was four laps back.

The sudden demise of the Merzario Ferrari set the stage for one of the most thrilling endurance race finishes in memory. Most of the world championship endurance races are won by a matter of 50 to 100 miles.

McQueen, driving with his broken left foot in a cast and wrapped with a black sock, hobbled to his car on crutches prior to the start of the race. Then sharing the driving with Revson, the two relentlessly set out in pursuit of the high-powered and heavily-favored factory Porsches and Ferraris.

Siffert, who set a single lap record early in the day in the other factory Porsche, was switched late in the race to the closer car in what appeared then to be a losing chase.

More than half the 68 cars that started the race were still running.

Another Ferrari that had been chasing hard after Andretti, dropped by the way as Florida's hot sun gave way to night and a cooling breeze.

The Jackie Ickx and Peter Schetty Ferrari, which had been running a strong second, went out with a blown head gasket.

Wynn Talking But Hasn't Signed Yet

COACA, Fla. (UPI)—Jim Wynn, the Houston Astros holdout centerfielder, arrived in camp early Saturday night and had a short salary talk with general manager H.B. "Spec" Richardson.

"He touched base with me," Wynn said. "I haven't signed. We're going to talk again later."

Richardson was going to meet with his staff as Wynn left for town with some of his teammates. Wynn said he might talk again with Richardson late Saturday night or Sunday morning.

The slugging outfielder, who hit 33 homers last year, reportedly made $47,500 in 1969. He has been quoted as saying he had asked for $62,000 this year. He said Richardson had offered him a $10,000 raise at one time but later reduced it to $5,000 when they did not reach agreement.

Wynn sent word ahead in his second trip to Florida this Spring that he would accept a $12,500 raise, apparently meaning $60,000. In his last trip here, he stayed two days and left in a huff, saying Richardson would not negotiate with him.

The odds against being dealt a royal flush in poker are 649,739 to 1.

Kentucky Brings Dan Issel, Pratt Into ABA

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—All-American Dan Issel of Kentucky Saturday signed an American Basketball Association contract with the Kentucky Colonels for a reported $1.4 million—approximately the same amount that Lew Alcindor received from the Milwaukee Bucks last year.

Issel's teammate, forward Mike Pratt, also signed with the Colonels for a reported $400,000.

The twin signings give the ABA a further jump on the National Basketball Association in their talent war this year.

Previously signed by ABA teams were Rick Mount of Purdue by the Indiana Pacers, Mike Maloy of Davidson by the Pittsburgh Pipers and Charlie Scott of North Carolina by the Washington Caps.

The NBA hasn't as yet held its draft meeting, which is scheduled for Monday.

Issel, a 6-foot, 8 1/2-inch pivotman, is expected to be converted to forward by the Colonels' coach Gene Rhodes said he would probably use the 6-4 Pratt as a swing man operating at either guard or forward.

Issel averaged 33.9 points per game and Pratt 19.3 this season in pacing Kentucky to a 27-2 record and top ranking in the final United Press International ratings. Issel also became the all-time leading scorer in University of Kentucky history.

Newly Formed Optimist Club Hears Talk By Police Chief

Despite continuing rumors and stories of "drugs in Twin Falls," the problem just isn't that simple — expert undercover agents working without the help or knowledge of any law enforcement officers have been unable to "make a buy," according to Police Chief Frank Barnett.

Speaking to the recently formed Optimist Club on Thursday, Chief Barnett outlined the "drug problem" in Twin Falls, pointing out that rumors are abundant, but facts are few and narcotics are extremely hard to find.

"I'll admit right here and now that I don't know what the percentage of drug use is in Twin Falls; nobody knows."

Johnstone, president; Lyman Davis, vice president, and Lowell Wilson, secretary-treasurer. Optimist members and guests are asked to use the plate holders to publicize the club.

Chief Barnett said:

Many people will say they know "where you can find drugs," but when you pin them down to facts, they don't actually know very much. The veteran law enforcement officer said.

There undoubtedly is some drug use in the Twin Falls area, principally in smoking of marijuana, which is relatively inexpensive and available to those who know where to look. LSD is falling into disuse, though some is used; but many youngsters are becoming afraid of its effects.

Abuse of prescription drugs and diet pills is very common among young people. Chief Barnett said.

Barnett said: it's just too expensive and marijuana will usually produce much the same effect.

"Even the hard-line heroin user — and there are some in Twin Falls — will use a synthetic drug such as dextroamphetamine; he can get more effect at less cost than by using heroin."

"Any heroin that would teach into the Magic Valley area would be greatly diluted with sugar to a strength of less than one per cent of that found in major cities," the chief said.

"Any marijuana user from this area who tried to use heroin in New York City would be as dead as if he had been shot; the heroin there is so much stronger," he added.

Chief Barnett said he asked "out-of-state agencies" to send undercover men into Twin Falls completely without his knowledge. "I didn't want to know them, or have my men know they were here."

No opium or heroin has been found in Twin Falls, Chief Barnett said.

West May Benefit In Power Shift

The palace revolution that overthrew Cambodian Chief of State Prince Sihanouk this week was hopefully regarded in some quarters as a token of a pro-Western turn in the affairs of the strategically-situated nation.

Sihanouk was deposed by parliament after a week of rioting in Phnom Penh, the capital, by youths protesting the presence on Cambodian soil of Communist troops from Vietnam. North Vietnam and the Viet Cong have been using Cambodia as a military sanctuary for years.

Cheng Heng, president of the National Assembly, was installed as an interim chief of state, but the real power was believed to rest in the hands of Lt. Gen. Lon Nol, the premier and defense minister, and Deputy Premier Prince Sisowath Sirik Matak.

Sihanouk was on a tour of Communist capitals when he was ousted, trying to persuade Moscow or Peking to force the Vietnamese Reds out of Cambodia. He warned that if they did not do so, he might be overthrown by pro-Western elements in Cambodia.

Nol and Matak are staunch anti-Communists. In an announcement shortly after Sihanouk was ousted, the new administration said it will adhere to his policy of "strict neutrality," but also denounced him for an "attitude . . . against the will of the entire Cambodian nation."

Around the world:

New York—The first letter carriers' strike in U.S. history "stayed the swift couriers from the completion of their appointed rounds"—first in New York and its suburbs, then in a growing number of cities across the country.

Jerusalem—Israeli commandos struck 55 miles into Syria to shell an army camp 20 miles beyond Damascus and sabotage a power line in the biggest military action on the northern front since the 1967 War. Israeli spokesmen said the raid was a retaliation for Syrian cease-fire violations.

Boston—An Eastern Airlines copilot was killed and his captain and a pistol-packing passenger were wounded in a shoot-out on the flight deck of a Newark-to-Boston shuttle jet. The captain, with bullets in both arms, brought the plane in to a safe landing.

OEO Program Rapped

By LEE TREMAINE

Times-News Staff Writer

"The OEO (Office of Economic Opportunity) is a good idea gone to pot. You can't run a poverty program from somebody's office."

"What use is the poverty program? How much is enough money? You simply can't go on handing out money forever."

These divergent views of the work of OEO in battling poverty were advocated Friday afternoon during a meeting of Community Action Program (CAP) directors in a unique confrontation between extremist spokesmen.

Roy Smith, instructor in the Black Studies program at Idaho State University, and Gene Hull Twin Falls, affiliated with the Twin Falls Bank and trust, debated their differing views of poverty for CAP directors from throughout the state.

Larry Mack, Community Action Agency director in Twin Falls, moderated the discussion, warning the directors that "We have hoped in these sessions that you people would begin to question your role in fighting poverty. I have asked two brave men to come here and attack you to further this aim."

Mr. Smith is also working on a master's degree in special education at ISU, and is originally from Chicago. He has wide experience on human relations panels and is on a first-name basis with people known from coast to coast," Mr. Mack said.

Mr. Smith spoke to the group from a sitting position, pointing out that "I don't want to stand up and look down on you." Speaking from his considerable experience in the ghettos of Chicago, he asked "What is poverty? It is an experience in living. Some say poverty is a lack of money, or a bad neighborhood, or a condition of mind. It's all of these: It's an 'experience in living.'

Many attempts to alleviate poverty don't work; "In Chicago the social worker is a most despised person." The term "poverty war" has unfortunate connotations; "it stirs up bad feelings in many people.

Maybe if they had a 'police action' against poverty it would have been understood," he said, drawing an appreciative chuckle from the audience.

The problem of poverty is how to attack it constructively. "You can read a book on poverty but not live it; you can live it but not read about it, or you can do both. Each is a different level of experience and must be handled differently."

One major problem is that politics often enters in; "when you start short-circuiting City Hall, you have more problems than you started with," Mr. Smith warned.

"You need to tap both the heart and the pocketbook to solve poverty... and all we've been able to do is tap the pocketbook for just a trickle of money. You've got to be careful or you'll end up 20 years further behind."

Past "methodology" just doesn't work; "We must attack poverty at all levels that it exists."

All phases and factors must be considered: "If you ignore the people you're ignoring the problems; if you ignore the politicians, you're ignoring the people who must help you solve the problem, and if you ignore the sociologists, you're ignoring the only people that might have a solution."

State Policeman Bill Watts, late. He was taken to St. Benedict's hospital where he was treated and released.

He told Watts he didn't see or hear the train until it was too late.

He noted one possible solution to even the two enrollments would be to divide the Pioneer District resulting in approximately 620 students at West and 720 at East.

Another item for consideration of the public will be the need to switch teachers to other grade levels. Mr. Meyer said school enrollment shows a decrease in grades 1-6 and an increase in grades 7-12. He said the possibility of closing Pioneer Elementary school of Health, Education and Welfare) has another definition."

Mr. Hull took a differing point of view, in reply to Mr. Smith. He introduced himself by admitting that "I like to think I'm a conservative type" and asked "Where do you stop?" in referring to efforts to alleviate poverty by spending federal funds.

"I have friends that are living well and comfortably on $5,000 per year; I know other people who are starving on $10,000 and

I've even got friends that went bankrupt on $50,000 per year. You just can't say everyone must have a minimum of $3,000 per year, and you simply can't hand out money forever."

He scolded the farmers who are burning potatoes. "If we are concerned about poverty, why aren't those potatoes put to good use; why aren't the poor people invited to come and take them."

Appeal Of Dillon Is Postponed

Michael Dillon's appeal on a second degree murder conviction will be heard in Boise during the Supreme Court's May term.

The case was to be heard in Twin Falls Friday but at the last minute the Chief Justice ordered the case set aside for argument at a later time.

Justice Joseph McFadden said a request was presented to the court shortly before the scheduled 10 a.m. hearing Friday asking for an extension of time in which to file an appellant's reply brief.

The request, by the state, was considered by the court then it was decided to delay the case until the May term. Justice McFadden said a complete record would allow the court to consider all the merits of the case.

Dillon, free on $3,000 bond presently, is convicted of murdering Alta Simerly of Jerome. She died in 1967 and he was convicted in 1968.

The court also heard an appeal by Larry C. Price against the state in connection with his conviction of robbing Erbs Market in Buhl in 1968. He contended the state did not have sufficient evidence to gain a conviction.

That case was taken under advisement.

8 Men Running In Bellevue Election

Six men are vying for the three alderman posts and two others want to be elected mayor in the April 6 election. Bellevue, one of the oldest communities in Blaine county, is the only surviving charter city in the state and thus is pretty much a law unto itself.

Under the old charter system, a mayoralty election is called every year on the first Monday in April.

Incumbent Charles Wright is opposed for the mayor's post by Halbert Hatch. Candidates for aldermen, nominated during a special caucus held in the Bellevue city hall itself a landmark, are Mark Patterson and William Hickman, both incumbents; Claude Ballard, James Etchison, Ralph Lee and Glen Stelma.

Incumbent Jim Koonce is not seeking another term as alderman. The mayor serves one year and the aldermen will be elected for two-year terms.

Nominations were made at the public meeting, with four signatures required on the nominating petitions.

Not Me

JEROME — Linda Rae Watts, Jerome, says she does not have any livestock as erroneously reported in Thursday's Times-News story on the city council meeting. She only has cats in her apartment at 115 East Sixth.

Her name was mistakenly reported as the person Gene Broughton told councilmen was keeping two horses and one steer on a small lot. Mr. Broughton said Saturday the complaint was brought against another Watts, whose first name he did not divulge, who lives at 526 West B and not Linda Rae Watts.

Metal Arts Assume Many Forms

By NORMA HERZINGER

They're doing their own thing — creating. And, who's to say what's art and what isn't.

Be it impressionistic, modern, contemporary, abstract, or what have you, these gals have made it during the basic acetylene welding sculpture classes at the College of Southern Idaho Area Vocational School.

The classes, conducted on an experimental basis, were to encompass 15 hours, three hours of theory and safety and nine hours of application sheet metal welding and sculpture, instruction in brazing techniques and a final welded sculpture project.

According to the instructor, Frank Schell, these gals took to this like ducks to water and enjoyed the sculpture so much the classes were extended for three more Saturdays.

Welding sculpture, or metal art, is the ability to weld, with torch and metal, any art object or decoration that one can possibly visualize. It can be modernistic or realistic, large as a house or small as a thimble, for outdoors or indoors, for floor, table or wall. You name it, and with a little bit of imagination — you can make it.

Class members were first taught safety and how to light the torch, etc., then completed two small projects recommended by Mr. Schell. After this, they designed and created their own art objects, a real sight to behold.

One woman, for example, started with a pitchfork and hay hooks and came up with a candelabra and wall candleholders. Another made a large elaborate butterfly spray for her wall, getting her idea from a display in a local store.

One class member made a seven-foot tall philodendron plant depicting its identifiable sheathing leaf stalk and snowy foliage. Upon completion, this artistic decoration will be placed in the foyer of one of the local businesses.

Art objects made during the classes were many and varied, but all expressed complete individuality.

The course is non-credit, but will carry a certificate upon satisfactory completion. According to the instructor, since such marvelous response was shown for the classes, additional classes may be offered in the fall.

So, husbands — if the wife comes up with the idea of building a workshop of her own, acquire an acetylene welder, then makes an open plea for scrap metal, she really isn't going into business for herself, she's promoting her hobby.

USING THE ACETYLENE WELDER to create her art project is Clarice Glasscock. Art objects made during the classes were many and varied, but all expressed complete individuality.

Women's Section

ASSISTING THIS CREATIVE class member, Virginia Westergren, is Frank Schell, class instructor. Mrs. Westergren is making a seven-foot philodendron plant for a foyer display.

YOU TAKE A PITCHFORK and you end up with a candelabra — that's what Joy Nielsen did during the recent sculpture classes. Here her instructor, Frank Schell, gives her a little assistance. Other items Joy made during the classes include candleholders made from hay hooks. The classes, conducted on an experimental basis, were so well received they may be offered again in the fall.

WELDING LIKE A REAL professional is Mary Alice Jenkins as she participates in the recent art classes. The classes consisted of theory and safety, application sheet metal welding and sculpture, instruction in brazing techniques and a final welded sculpture project, at the College of Southern Idaho Area Vocational School.

ONE OF THE ART ITEMS made by Kay Dodds is this ostrich figurine. She plans to embed this in a rock base and it will stand approximately 18 inches high. The acetylene welding scripture course is non-credit, but will carry a certificate upon completion.

DEAR ABBY: I am an advisor for a girl's teen club. The mother of one of the girls told me that about three years ago you had two letters in your column dealing with how boys really felt about girls who were "nice" and girls who weren't. She said one was signed "TOO NICE, TOO" and the other was signed "NOT SORRY," and you printed them both on the same day.

If you can locate them, will you please run them again? Thank You.

MRS. A.D.R.

DEAR MRS. A.D.R.: A sharp eyed secretary found them in the 1967 file, and here they are:

NOT SORRY

DEAR ABBY: No offense to you, personally, but you're nuts! I agree with that girl who signed herself, "TOO NICE." She's right. If a girl is too nice she sits home. It's the fast girls who are popular. I am only 16 and I know from experience that the only reason a boy asks you out is for one thing, and if he doesn't get it, you don't see him again. That's no lie, either. When you said, "If a girl has to fight with a boy to keep his hands off her, she must have led him on," you were wrong. She can be sitting next to him, doing nothing, and he will almost attack her. Since January I have had to break up with three boys because they all tried to go too far. But I'll stay nice because I have my self-respect. But so far it hasn't got me anywhere.

"TOO NICE, TOO"

DEAR TOO NICE: Another "nice" girl had this to say on the subject:

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and have just completed my freshman year at college. I want to tell all those girls who wonder if boys really like a sweet, old fashioned girl what I learned from experience: Don't be

At the reception held in the Kimberly LDS Church, the bride wore a white brocade long gown, featuring long lily point sleeves and a rounded neckline with a full skirt floating from the empire waistline. A self material train was fastened at the high waistline back.

Her bouquet was fashioned of pink roses and white daisies. Her bouffant illusion net shoulder-length veil was held by a large rose made of the brocade material.

Pamela VonIns, Fowers Wed

The United Methodist Church, Salt Lake City, was the setting Jan. 30 for the wedding of Pamela Karen Von Ins, Twin Falls, and Randy Frank Fowers, Pocatello. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jewell A. Von Ins, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Clair Fowers, Rupert.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Eugene L. Davis. The wedding music was played by Mrs. C. L. Prisk, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white Peau de soie satin wedding gown with a white nylon chiffon overlay. The empire waistline was accented with a wide band of venise lace and tiny seed pearls outlined the flowers in the lace. Full, fingertip-length sleeves of the nylon chiffon were gathered at the wrist with bands of the peau de soie satin. They were covered with the venise lace and outlined with seed pearls. Her shoulder-length veil of bridal English illusion, fell from a headpiece of venise lace leaves and hearts and flowers of seed pearls. The bridal gown and headpiece were designed and made by the bride's mother.

The bride carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations encircled with tulle accented with pink satin ribbon streamers. Her jewelry featured a pair of gold earrings and a gold heart-shaped necklace outlined with cultured pearls around a white sapphire, which had belonged to her great-grandmother, Mrs. William W. Foster, and made into a necklace for the bride. She carried a white linen handkerchief embroidered in Madeira, which was a gift to her mother from her father and carried by her mother at their wedding.

A special guest at the wedding was the bride's grandfather, John L. Lundin. After the wedding, the bridal party was entertained at a dinner in the Roadway Inn, Salt Lake City. A reception was held for the couple on Feb. 22 at the YMCA building, Twin Falls.

The wedding party greeted guests before an arch of pink roses and greenery. Toni Robinson, King Hill, a college friend of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

The gift tables were covered with white cloths. Each table was swagged with pink and green satin ribbon and held pink feather chrysanthemums at the corners. Gifts were received and arranged by Betty Grose, College of Idaho student, and Bonnie Haffner, Twin Falls, and school friends of the bride.

The reception table was encircled with a white embroidered nylon skirt over satin and covered with a "White House" Sardinian lace cloth. A three-tiered white wedding cake centered the table and was decorated with pink roses, green leaves and tiny molded sugar cupids. The cake was topped with a large, white heart.

NO MODERN FIXTURES here. The Antique Room of the Lilu Chateau contains the chairs once used in the old Park Hotel that was torn down to make way for the new Twin Falls Post Office building.

Office building. Tables have been collected from various areas and include one large oak table from the Laidlaw Ranch at Muldoon. This table, Mr. Francis says, was brought to the United States from Scotland in the early days of Idaho.

BALLROOM IN CHATEAU utilized flooring from the old Challis High School which Mr. Francis installed board by board for the dance floor measuring 75 by 40 feet. Railing around the stage was the old oak bannisters from the jury box and bench in the district court chambers of the Twin Falls County Courthouse. Now completed, the building will be available to groups or individuals for dances, parties, conventions or other gatherings. Exterior of this part of the building was the main floor area of the old county nursing home that Mr. Francis salvaged several years ago. It had stood many years just east of the Amalgamated Sugar Co. plant.

Chateau Tells Historical County Story

For nearly 40 years Luke Francis, Twin Falls, has been making something out of nothing.

In the operation of his salvage business, he has collected discarded items ranging from small pieces of scrap metal to buildings. His early participation in the salvage business even included bones and rags.

With this background and his ability to work at almost every job, he has just completed a three-year project in which he combined a number of historic old buildings and a vast collection of old furniture and equipment into something of a recreation center.

Named the Lilu Chateau from the combined first names of his wife and himself, the building measures 240 feet in length by 40 feet and includes a large ballroom or auditorium, a cafe and large kitchen area, bar and dining room known as the Antique Room.

Located at the end of Fourth Avenue West on Rock Creek canyon, the building has drawn considerable comment and many questions.

In his building, Mr. Francis has preserved much history of the early days in Twin Falls and nearly every object, wall and brick has a story of its own. The east end of the Chateau is an old building Mr. Francis salvaged and moved to Twin Falls from Milner. One of the oldest buildings in the county, it provided quarters at the Milner Dam site for workers during the construction of the dam. Most of the Chateau was made from the old county nursing home that was cut in sections and moved from its site just east of town beyond the sugar factory several years ago. The old two-story building was once used to house employees of the sugar factory when transportation between town and the plant was not so simple. It had been used by the county for the care of indigent and aged residents for many years.

Redwood and brick exterior of the building represents other old structures. Redwood was salvaged from the old water tower near the railroad years ago.

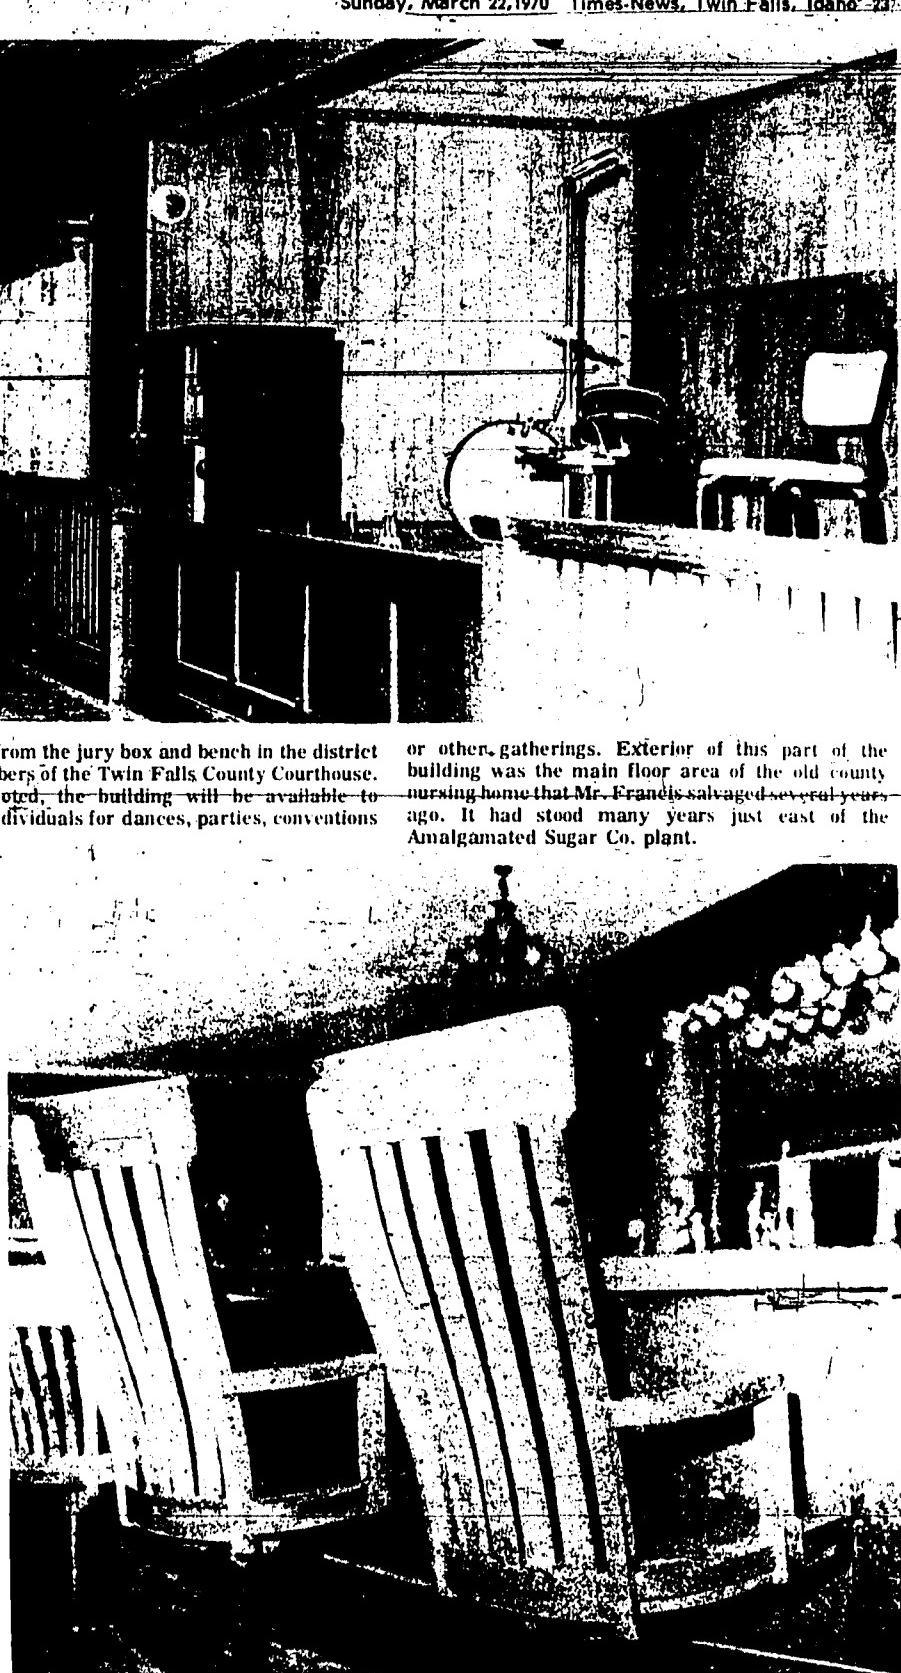

Brick for the lower portion of the exterior walls came from a number of buildings, mostly in Twin Falls, which were demolished. Some were formerly in the walls of the old courthouse in Ely, Nev.

Mr. Francis explains the bar was taken from the old Wooden Spur building in Ketchum and is extremely old. He covered the top with small tiles and bordered it with agates inlaid in plastic. All of the glasses in bar and kitchen are also from the Wooden Spur or other now closed and demolished businesses.

The ballroom, 100 by 40 feet, may make some attorneys a bit nostalgic. The rail which surrounds the stage for the band or orchestra, is the old oak railing that once surrounded the bench and attorney's quarters in the district court room of the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

One of the most unusual collections of bar stools in Twin Falls is in the bar and consists of the old jury chairs from the same courtroom. These are also oak and include four with high-backs and six others with average backs. As they were too low for bar stools, Mr. Francis used the regular mountings but added an extension.

"If someone drinks too much, you can just lower the chair by removing the extension and he won't be able to reach the bar," said one of the customers.

BAR STOOLS MAY LOOK familiar to those who have served on jury duty in Twin Falls County in past years. They are the old high-back oak chairs removed from the courtroom jury box of the county courthouse when the new judicial building was erected. To make them high enough, Mr. Francis used the same iron mountings but added an extension.

KITCHEN EQUIPMENT includes these two cast iron commercial stoves, one from the old Antler Cafe on Kimberly road and the other once used in Wray's Cafe in Twin Falls. The kitchen area also served as the kitchen in the old nursing home but has been revised to some extent.

Large stainless steel sinks in the kitchen are reserved for pots and pans.

The large kitchen that served the "old folks home" was kept intact but remodeled. In it are a number of reconstructed warming and serving tables. Two large stoves of cast iron have been installed. One is from the old Wray's Cafe and the other from the Antler Cafe that once stood on Kimberly Road where Tate Furniture is now located.

Paintings, some of them by Mr. Francis and others of unknown origin, adorn the walls and old fashioned wall racks, including mirrors and hooks for coats and hats, are also on the walls of the room. Many came from the old Waverly Hotel which Mr. Francis said contained many antiques when he purchased it.

Chandeliers in the room were removed from the old Carl

From the Woolworth building, old hospital and other places he obtained equipment that could be converted or refinished for the kitchen area. Enough dishes of one pattern were obtained from the Woolworth building to serve 500 people.

Light fixtures throughout the building are from such forgotten buildings as the old Perrine and Park hotels, old homes or other structures. Hardly a building has been demolished in Twin Falls that hasn't contributed something to Mr. Francis' building.

A resident of this area since the depression days of 1931 when he, his wife and seven young children came here, Mr. Francis is now 76 years of age.

REDWOOD AND USED BRICK combine for exterior walls of the Lilu Chateau on Fourth Avenue West in Twin Falls. Builder, Luke Francis, says the building includes the old county nursing home and at the far left, one of the county's oldest structures. A frame building, it was moved from Milner which was once used to house workers during the building of Milner Dam.

BAR WAS RECOVERED from an early day mining era saloon in Ketchum and modified slightly in installation. Luke Francis, above, who built the entire Chateau from old and historic buildings, covered the bar with small tile and bordered it in agates set in plastic material for protection and preservation. Glasses for the bar and kitchen came from the Wooden Spur, Ketchum, when it was demolished.

Population Explosion Hits Rod, Gun Sports

By JIM HUMBIRD

Idaho Fish-Game Department
Idaho history during the next decade will repeat parts of its early territorial days of the 1860's and 1870's. Thousands of people will come here in waves from both seacoasts and points between.

A century and more ago, rich strikes of gold and silver stamped them — experienced "old timers" from "petered" out placer and quartz lodes in California and Nevada, and raw "tenderfeet" from the East. Many of them settled and helped build a new state. Today, Idaho's population has grown to an estimated 710,000 residents. Some leaders think this is the comfortable carrying capacity of the state without retreating from present standards of excellence.

The cry already is heard to "keep out the nonresidents," especially the hunters and fishermen. It does not take the wisdom of Solomon, or even a crystal ball, to forecast that restrictions are bound to come as hunting and fishing grounds become congested. In California and other states of high density populations, hunting and fishing opportunities in some places are on a "first come, first served" basis, and a gate is locked when the quota is reached. Necessity requires that residents, as well as nonresidents, be excluded when capacity has been reached.

The U.S. Department of Commerce puts out projection figures of anticipated state, national and world population gains. For example, such projections show Idaho with something like 735,000 residents in five years, and more than 800,000 by 1980. Current population figures show about 204 million people in the United States, and more than 3½ billion inhabitants on earth. These figures are expected to double in 35 years or less.

In spite of swift encroachment on good fish and game habitat and geometric increases in numbers of fishermen and hunters in the 1970's, the outlook should still be bright in Idaho. As always, there will be some lean times, but there are good days and years ahead in this state for hunters and fishermen willing to put out a little more effort to get away from the competition.

For example, hunting in any decade depends on two things — abundance of game and abundance of opportunity. The same can be said for fishing. In Idaho, and with continued good management, there is no doubt about the abundance of fish and wildlife resources. Projecting what is known about wildlife conservation, and present social and land-use trends, the outlook in Idaho for the next ten years still is favorable.

During the 1970's, a growing part of forest management on both public and private lands will be outdoor recreation of all kinds.

Hunting and fishing will have a big piece of the action. Elk and deer, both mule deer and whitetail, should hold up well in Idaho and continue to be the mainstay of hunting.

Good game management practices can be expected to keep other species of big game animals in a healthy state. A good example is the pronghorn antelope, once a rare and endangered species, now quite common over a large range in southern Idaho and some of the other states of the intermountain west.

Modern farming takes its toll on some species of upland game birds. Habitat changes and the use of herbicides and pesticides have revolutionized the industry within living memory.

On the other hand, the introduction of exotic species like the chukar partridge from the Middle East and the Merriam's wild turkey from the mountains of Colorado, have proved very successful — especially the chukar. The chukar occupies land which no native game bird uses. It is so well adapted to this arid, rocky country that biologists claim it would be difficult to over-harvest.

American technology is producing more food on less land, and agricultural experts are recommending marginal farmlands be shifted to other uses. Best of all, farm economists say land retirement should be on a long-term basis rather year-to-year. This would have a huge effect on all farm game — rabbits, quail, partridge and pheasants — and give long-range game management programs a chance to pay dividends.

The 1960's was a decade of strong ups and downs for waterfowl, but generally ended on a high note. This renewable wildlife resource will continue to fluctuate in the 1970's, but harvestable surpluses of ducks and geese will be around for many years to come.

There is growing support for wetland conservation and the multimillion dollar federal wetlands program, and other efforts should begin to tell. The rising tide of citizen interest is having increased effect. Ducks Unlimited, for example, collected over a million dollars for the first time in 1966. Only three years later, the group doubled that amount and collected over $2 million for wetlands in Canada.

Dove populations are good and fit in with suburban patterns of land use. There should be enough birds in the

Money Box

Two developments in the collecting field may be of interest to our readers:

(1) It is now projected that two-dollar bills, which were discontinued in 1966, will be printed again, and the Mt. Rushmore reverse, scheduled for the new one-dollar bills will probably appear on the two-dollar notes.

(2) A compromise has tentatively been reached in Congress calling for the production of the Eisenhower Dollar. Because of agitation created by the "Silver State" Congressmen, principally McClure of Idaho, it is now projected some 140 million proof and uncirculated dollars will be produced, with part of them containing 40 per cent silver — these to be sold at premium prices to collectors. This means there will be two varieties of the Eisenhower dollars — one with the silver content and one made from copper-nickel. Production of these new dollars is scheduled for the Fiscal Year of 1971, but some of them may bear the 1970 date. No design has as yet been approved for the new dollar.

This column is beginning the process of setting-up the pages of our second Idaho Merchant's Tokens book, and we would appreciate any information readers may have about any "hickies" or merchant's tokens we have not already seen, so they may be included in the book. Please let us know if you have such tokens, or know of them.

Question from R. D. Carey, Idaho: I have two bills. One is for one dollar and the other for fifty cents. They have British North Borneo Company on them; the Treasury, Sandakan. Is this company still in existence? Have they any value?

I also have a Canadian nickel, year 1919. It is much smaller than our present dime. What is its value? Do you know how many "Lucky Lindbergh" coins were made?

Answer: Your notes come from British North Borneo, which is a crown colony on the northern tip of the island of Borneo. The British North Borneo Company issued both coins and paper money, and the value of the paper money, in United States Exchange would be approximately 33 cents for the one dollar note and half of that for the fifty cent note. These notes do not have any particular value, although they do not often appear out here in Idaho, and a collector of foreign paper money would probably pay a dollar apiece for them, as curiosities.

The small silver nickels of Canada were minted from 1858 until 1921 when they were replaced by the present sized coin. Some of these silver nickels have a lot of premium value in the better conditions, but the 1919 was minted in over 7 million pieces, and brings only $7.00 in brand new condition. You do not indicate the condition of your coin; it is worth from thirty five cents to the seven dollar uncirculated price.

The "Lucky Lindbergh" piece you have is a medal, not a coin. I can find no figures on how many were made, but probably the number would exceed a million, since Lindbergh's flight over the Atlantic was an international feature. Such medals were issued both here and abroad, in large quantities, as souvenirs. Their value is not great — generally around a dollar, if they are in extremely fine condition. There are many varieties of these, depending upon the company which issued them.

Questions on coins and currency should be sent to The Money Box, care of the Times News, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Book Review

By CARROLL BRIGGS

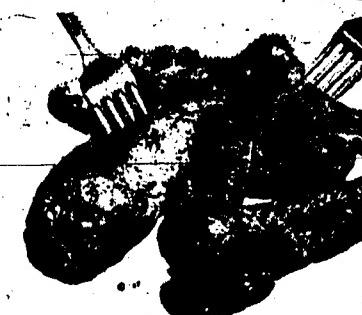

Twin Falls Public Library

Oh boy did I ever pick up a good book at the library the other day. It's Andy Granatelli's biography, "They Call Me Mister 500." I suppose you figure biographies are dull, and anything written by a race car driver and builder couldn't be that great. Don't jump to conclusions this guy writes a fantastic story.

For the first twenty-five pages it's the rough and rugged story of kids in Chicago during the great depression; collecting bottles for pennies and, "Start your car for a buck muister?... A quarter, maybe? Well, how about a dime-Sir?" The kind of thing you need for orientation. Then, he started telling the story about "The House-Trailer Transport Deal," that really started me chuckling — imagine towing a forty foot trailer at 70-80 miles per hour to LA behind a hotrod!

The next one really got to me. It's called "Me and my old Henderson Super X." For a week I collared anyone I could find standing still for ten minutes to read the whole chapter aloud to them. The result was always the same —

Castleford Couple Recalls Laos As Enjoyable But Most Insecure

By ZADA WISECAVER
Times-News Correspondent

CASCADE — Two experts on conditions in Laos are now making their home in Castleford, but they read the news of that country with some special interest, recalling the two years they lived among the people there.

Jon Wells and his wife, Carol, returned late last year when political situations in Laos changed their plans to remain there another two years under the International Voluntary Services program, part of the U.S. SID system directed by the State Department.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wells are graduates of the Twin Falls High School and University of Idaho. They joined the IVS program in 1967 after hearing about it through Jon's cousin who entered the program after serving with the Brethren Volunteer Service.

After orientation work in Washington, D.C., the young couple went to the Philippines to study at the International Rice Research Institute. Here they became familiar with all of the rice varieties grown in the Far East, learned the culture of the area, customs of the people, the available food and the needs of the families.

Their next stop was Bangkok and then on to Vientiane, the age who had graduated from capital of Laos. Here the couple the sixth grade and then studied the language, received six months of special geography of Laos and more training about the customs of the people.

Language, Mrs. Wells said, was not so difficult as it resembles English in many ways but there are fewer words. If Laos, their assignment was determined by the government of that country as to where they were needed most and they were off to the northern part of the country where Mr. Wells assisted a county agent in teaching irrigation methods for rice growing.

The "county agent" was a young man, 18 to 20 years of

to eat for one year and given three "hectares," or about six acres-to-clear, level-and-farm. At the end of the year the farmer was on his own and supposedly self supporting. From the Laos county agent he received help in developing his farming practices but could grow only enough rice to feed his own family. "With the increase of refugees and the number of soldiers to feed the country began seeing an ever expanding rice shortage," Mr. Wells said. "The economy is such that there is little industry and the terrain is largely mountainous."

Transportation is also a problem and roads are poor in the Sayaboury area. Mr. and Mrs. Wells were flown to their station by the U.S. government.

Mrs. Wells worked as an advisor to the home economics agent of that region and helped with sewing and construction of the native Laos dress.

Patterns for blouses were cut from brown wrapping paper on the floor of the sewing room and the women used the patterns to cut their cloth, then stitched the blouses together by hand. Their skirts, tubular in shape, are folded or tied to complete a graceful and attractive costume. Most of the skirts are of bright border print material.

Mrs. Wells said while the food was plentiful at their station the diet was inadequate in protein and vitamins.

While her husband was assisting the farmers in better rice production methods, Mrs. Wells worked with the other advisors and Lao agents on a nutrition survey and study of eating habits. Women were cooperative and eager to learn. They quickly adapted to the use of more pork, chicken, duck and even buffalo meat to increase protein in their meals.

A highly popular project was the production of fish in small home ponds which were then cooked as a protein supplement in their meals. Mr. Wells was instrumental in introducing this project, bringing fish from a hatchery by air. The fish arrived in plastic containers and were quickly deposited in small farm ponds.

Assistance Is Asked

A call has gone out for volunteers, both men and women, to assist with training programs and care for children in the new Child Development Center in Twin Falls.

The center's building is nearing completion across Falls Avenue from the CSI campus and will soon be ready for occupancy. State Health Department officials say women and men are needed to devote two hours or more a week to assist in working with individual retarded children in training of sewing, housework, industrial arts and other activities.

Those willing to assist are asked to call Paul Burnett at the center, 734-2235.

chison, particularly in her portraits of Indian women. Her bright colorful flower paintings have wide-spread appeal. Mrs. Hutchinson was born in New York City and studied art and design in that city where she had her own gallery. She later moved to California to continue her art work.

Her paintings have been widely exhibited both in New York and in California as well as a number of private collections including those of actress Eve Arden and Ross Martin.

Now a resident of Shoshone, Mrs. Hutchinson enjoys ranch life in Idaho.

Petition to probate Will of Mrs. Angy McClure was filed by Beatrice T. Nelson. Hearing is set for 10 a.m. April 9.

musical including the chorus and dancers. The show opens Saturday and continues through Sunday, March 29 in the CSI Fine Arts building.

MODERN STYLES WILL add a special note to "Camelot" as done by the music and drama departments of CSI next weekend. Here Terry Kimes, left, assists Steve Johnson; right, with brocade tunic which is one of his King Arthur costumes. Looking on and wearing black satin tunic is Richard Shabb.

WORK OF ART created by Mrs. Conrad Becker, Twin Falls, is this figure of one of the three wisemen. Mrs. Becker made the figure's hands and face in a natural color and contour then designed, made and decorated the clothing. This is one of a number of such figures she has made as part of her unusual hobby.

"Camelot" Going Modern In CSI Production

"Camelot," the story of King Arthur and his Roundtable, done in modern dress is a special treat in store for Magic Valley theater fans next week at the College of Southern Idaho.

The first musical production to be presented by CSI, the show will open March 28 and continue through Easter Sunday, March 29 in the Fine Arts Center.

Eugene Mildon, music instructor for CSI, is directing the production with Beverly Hackney as choreographer.

A cast of 70 students, one grade school boy and one dog will be featured in the show. Performing leading roles will be Rene Butler, Hansen, as Guenevere, who comes to Camelot to become Arthur's queen; Steve Johnson, Twin Falls, as King Arthur and Ron Braun as Lancelot, Guenevere's lover.

Miss Butler, a music major and a CSI sophomore has appeared in several Dilettante productions and is a soprano. In addition to her vocal talent, Miss Butler also plays piano and French horn.

Mr. Johnson, soloist with the CSI choir is well known at the college for his baritone voice and has been invited to appear this summer with the Kenley Play House in Warren, Ohio.

Mr. Braun, also a music major, is a sophomore at CSI and is appearing in his first major musical role as Lancelot.

Contract

Detweiler Bros., Inc., Twin Falls, have received a contract to furnish and install high temperature hot water boilers in new buildings at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

Amount of the local contract is approximately $939,000. Work is scheduled to begin immediately and be completed by the fall of 1971.

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Latest hobby of Mrs. Abbie L. Becker, 1704 9th Ave. E., Twin FALLS, is making sets of The Three Wise Men. They stand 28, 27 and 22 inches in height, and about the best word to describe them is "elegant," for their coloring in skin, clothing design and material radiates a richness that one immediately thinks befits the role of a king.

Though the heads and hands are purchased in a commercial kit, the originality of the skin coloring and design and charm of the clothing denotes the "artistic" touch of Mrs. Becker.

She comes by this artistic touch naturally — perhaps a gift from her own mother, Mrs. Jessie Danner, SHOSHONE, who in her own right does many different artistic works and even admits having helped her daughter a bit with the wise men.

Gasper, the Negro colored wise man, stands 28 inches and is arranged in the rear of the procession, Mrs. Becker notes. His beard shows a touch of grey and he wears a gold gown of peau de soi, a green satin robe of light avocado color and a green avocado cape.

Balthasar, stands 11 inches in height, the shortest of the wise men, and is situated in the center of the procession when properly located Mrs. Becker states. He wears a lavender chiffon gown, figured rayon jersey type robe and cape of yellow velvet cushion.

Melchoir, measuring 27 inches, who stands in the center of the arrangement in proper order, dominates the setting in most people's opinion and appears to be the "old man" with a definite grey beard and hairline showing under his elegant headpiece. His chiffon gown and satin robe, of red and pink colors, are caught up in the full depth of the burgundy-colored velvet cape that flows to definite chapel length.

Their hands are placed in front, as though holding the gifts they bear the Christ Child. They carry incense, myrrh and gold.

Bodies, under the clothing, are of simple styrofoam cones, and all are glued, even the clothing is glued rather than sewed.

The hands and heads are plaster of paris, and for the exact finish effect she wanted, Mrs. Becker hand painted them. To help her decide just how to do the finishing, she consulted the Biblical story and variations, suggesting the coloring and clothing. She said she ever went to the encyclopedia for information on the subject.

This particular set of the Wise Men belongs to her mother, Mrs. Becker points out, and she is now in the process of making another set for herself. She has consented to let Erickson's use this original set for one of their hobby display show entries in Salt Lake City this spring.

Though Mrs. Becker does feel

Other leading performers include Ralph Cody Huft as King Pellinore; Stephan Tucker as Mordred and 11-year-old Tim Driscoll as Tom of Warwick, son of King Arthur. Playing Merlin is Richard Shabb, Twin Falls. A special performer is "Bea," the St. Bernard dog owned by Mr. Mildon.

Mr. Mildon said the presentation of Camelot in modern dress and with simplified props and settings has been done in other areas with interesting results. Girls will be dressed in wide-legged pant suits or slacks and boys will appear in slacks, turtle necks with brocade tunics as over garments.

Settings and props for the two acts and 19 scenes will also be kept simple but effective with lighting providing much of the mood change.

Despite the modern touches in costumes and settings, the production will follow the normal and serious story of Camelot as familiar to theatre fans of the area.

Tickets for the production are available from members of the cast, at Helen's Record Shop or through the College.

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

By ROGER DOUGHTY

STAR STUFF—Say what you will about the maxcoat, but they're makin' it big in a new area—on guys. Whole thing seems to be a spinoff on Sly Stone, who wears them (they look good on him, too), although he calls them dinner coats. Very "in" to have one for state occasions, if your feet don't get tangled up in the fabric and plant you on your gourd. But, as Sly always says, everybody is a star.

GROOVE GOODIES—Seem's like we've told you a lot about cleaning records so they'll sound better, but the Garrisons, who make a lot of things on which said records are played, remind us that you gotta keep the turntable clean, too. If your turntable isn't covered, best idea is to get a dust cover (they don't cost much) so that all that hot grime and stuff won't blow onto the turntable and loose up the records. Clean the turntable with a clean, lintless cloth, every now and then. Otherwise, all your records may end up sounding like Three Dog Night.

WELSH SQUELCH—Tom Jones, the former coal miner who struck gold, makes the American scene in early April, starting with a date at New York's Copacabana. Owner Jules Padel hasn't kicked up prices during Tom's stay, but getting in to see him anywhere during his tour here—which will run through September—is going to be rough.

WHO'S WHERE—Once upon a time, gals trying to break into the fashion field had to be content picking up pins in the workshop at fashion houses. No more, though, since teens have taken over the field. In fact, Wanda Widokra, director of the Tropicana School of Fashion, says that most of today's graduates start at the top many as assistant to a designer, since the New Generation now decides what everybody else should be seen in. Good field for the 70s.

SHOES NEWS—Spring is about to be sprung which means bad news for the shoe folks, since it seems you don't bother to wear any when things get balmy. Sandals are OK, but there's nothing like hanging 10 all over the grass. Latest trend is to mlopshoes, practically bare feet, which give you that nothing feeling while providing a profit for the shoe folks.

COW PALACE Word has it that the back to nature crowd is the coldest a bit worried. Not that they're not geeking it big, but milk consumption is on the way up, up, and way up with teens according to the experts. Seems nice to us, if the cows don't get militant and demand overtime.

GROUP SCOOP—Not having run a supercontest in a week or two, we'll roll one out on the Carl Perkins-NRBQ LP, Boppin' the Blues. Give us a good reason for wanting it and you may get it. Write to Youth Beat, care of this paper.

SCIENTIFIC RIDDLE
Can Stress Affect the Sex of Your Children?

Ask Them Yourself

FOR LT. GEN. LEWIS HERSHY, former Director of Selective Service.

What will happen to the draft dodgers who are living in other countries? Will they be able to return to the U.S. after the war is over?—Mrs. Joseph Sitar, Waterbury, Conn.

They can voluntarily return to the U.S. any time; however, they may be prosecuted for violation of the Military Selective Service Act. Persons convicted of such violation may be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years or a fine of not more than $10,000 or both.

FOR ALDEN BARBER,

Master Chief Boy Scout Executive
How many of our Chief Justices of the U.S. were Boy Scouts in their earlier days?—Joseph Hille, Burien, Wash.

One Chief Justice, Warren Burger, who earned the rank of First Class Scout. His court predecessors, Earl Warren and Fred Vinson, were beyond scouting age when the Boy Scouts of America began in 1910 but have been active in scouting as adults.

FOR GRACE DAVAL,

New York Zoological Society
Are there any animals not in any zoo today that are being sought?
—Mrs. George Hill, Langdon, N.D.

Probably the animal most desired by American zoos at the present time is the Giant Panda from western China. The species was last exhibited in the New York Zoological Park in 1951. The only one now to be seen outside the Iron Curtain is in Regent's Park Zoological Society of London.

FOR REV. ROBERT E. HOWES,

national co-ordinator, Citizens for Public Prayer
What would happen if everyone who believes in prayer in the classroom marched on Washington?—H. A., Austin, Texas

A prayer march on Washington would make the recent Moratorium demonstrations look like a mere handful. A constitutional amendment restoring the civil right of free prayer to our public-school children could be the cutting edge in a great national return to God. On few issues are the American people more united

FOR WOODY ALLEN,

What do you think of the mini-skirt and nudity?—Mrs. R. L., Utica, N.Y.

I'm crazy about mini-skirts. I think the more you show off a girl up to a certain point—the more flattering it is. However, complete nudity is not as sexy as near nudity. And then, of course, there are some girls who would look great completely encased in armor.

FOR JACQUELINE SUSANN, author of "The Love Machine"

Why did you give up acting to write? Are you happy with your decision?—Mrs. Ralph Holmes, Waco, Texas

I always wanted to write. I always wanted to act. Unfortunately these talents cannot be put together. As an actress, I had to accept the roles I "looked" like. As a writer, I can write the way I want

FOR DR. H. BOSLEY WOOLF, Managing Editor, Merriam-Webster dictionaries

What's the longest word in the dictionary?—Bill Christie, San Mateo, Calif.

It's not "antidisestablishmentarianism," as many generally believe. That word was only created as an example of a long string of letters, and it isn't in our dictionary. The longest word is "pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanoconiosis." It's an ailment that hits miners as a result of inhaling very fine rock dust.

FOR CHARLES NELSON REILLY,

What make of car do you drive for your tv part as real-estate agent Claymore Gregg in "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir"?—Ina M. Kaul, Rapid City, S.D.

I drive a 1934 Ford touring car owned by 20th Century-Fox. Incidentally, a lot of device is used to make all that "steam."

Baby-Sitting Beauty Comedienne Edie Adams, mother of three girls, believes "you're never too young to start looking your best." So she added a special "Sugar and Spice" salon for toddlers to her regular chain of 125 beauty shops across the country. The youngest patron is two. While Mommy is getting cut and curled, little daughter gets the same but in a high chair and low diver, with balloons and lollipops. sissippi. Come Nov. 2, she will be retired because her 1926 design and construction do not comply with new safety at sea laws. Capt. Ernest E. Wagner polled some regular passengers on the old Queen on what they'll miss most. One thing was the big steam calliope, which belts out music heard as far as five miles away. Another was the bright red 26-ton stern paddle wheel, with its curtain of spray conveniently watering an important accessory: two boxes of growing mint plants. That's for the mint juleps, suh (and sorely missed, too).

one satisfied mother: "Now I don't have to hire a baby sitter when I get my hair done."

Knotty Problem One of the problems with today's wide neckties, according to the Men's Fashion Association of America, is simply tying them. Typical customer complaint: "It isn't easy to make a neat, attractive Windsor knot, especially with the wide heavy silks." They don't try for a Windsor at all. Tie instead a four-in-hand style or half-Windsor. If you never learned how, your favorite men's store clerk can show you.

Long Run for Safety What's the longest running musical show in the country?

"Hello, Dolly!"? The correct answer, as far as high schoolers are concerned, is "Music for Modern Americans," now in its sixth year. It's a live driver-education safety stage show. The performers are the Chrysler Spurtrowers, 27 young professional singers, dancers, instrumentalists. By the end of this school year, they will have traveled 65,000 miles through

Make This Your Loveliest Year Ever

Every year of a woman's life should bring with it a new phase of beauty, for today the discovery of a remarkable tropical moist oil at last assures her that each passing year can bring added loveliness to her complexion.

Extraordinary scientific achievement is embodied in this unique moist oil with its ability to contribute to the unfolding and blossoming of a radiantly beautiful complexion.

All skins need supplementary ministration of a particular kind after the age of twenty-five, when the glands gradually become less active and manufacture only a fractional quantity of vital skin fluids. Sometimes this deprivation of the essentials is brought about even more prematurely through unfavourable weather hazards, difficult climatic conditions or any one of a dozen other circumstances exclusive perhaps to the twentieth century that directly or indirectly have a depletory effect on natural dermic fluids.

A lavish application of the scientific moist oil to the face and neck helps sponsor nature's every effort to provide the skin with regenerative, sustaining elements that work to restore balanced functioning.

Optimum benefit is obtained from the natural balance of oil and moisture which this beauty fluid possesses. Cosmetic scientists have aptly described it as a "peeled" beauty oil, by which they mean it does not contain the heavy sealing elements common to normal oils. Its rapid softening and beautifying values are immediately available to the complexion and prove their worth most dramatically when applied to alleviate skin dryness, for the complexion quickly takes on a smoother, dewier, lovelier appearance.

Another great, beneficent property of the tropical moist oil is its readiness to further the skin's natural hygroscopic tendencies, and a healthy bloom is soon established as moisture is constantly attracted from the atmosphere to the complexion.

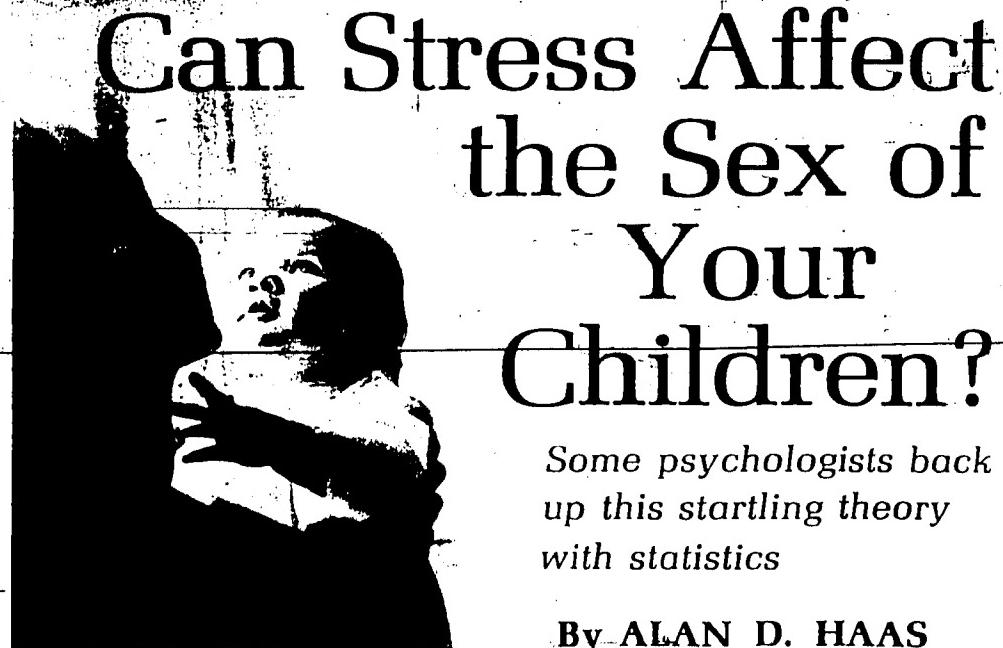

This moist tropical oil is obtainable in most countries of the world and here in America is available from druggists as oil of Olay. Smoothed over your skin daily and used as an ideal sub-foundation for make-up, it brings your complexion the richest dividends of beauty and heralds the attainment of your loveliest year ever.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Recommend

To gain the best benefits of the beautifying properties of this moist oil and to keep your complexion clear of wrinkle dryness always smooth on a film of oil of Olay beneath your make-up to protect and beautify your complexion whilst ensuring your make-up has perfect matt beauty.

Radiance is restored to the complexion when it is cherished with rich cream at night. Before you go to bed, massage gently with the oil of Olay, paying particular attention to the crow's-feet area where ageing lines first appear.

Towards maturity cherish your skin with a little extra care to smooth wrinkle-dryness and help keep facial lines at bay. Before retiring, apply a generous film of oil of Olay, massaging it with the finger-tips in circular movements that spiral upwards and outwards.

Can Stress Affect the Sex of Your Children?

Some psychologists back up this startling theory with statistics

By ALAN D. HAAS

THE SEX of your child may depend, in part, on the mood you and your mate are in at the time of conception. At least that's a theory advanced by one husband-wife research team.

Exactly what determines the sex of an unborn child is, of course, a complicated biological process that begins at the moment of conception. Science knows that there are 46 chromosomes; 44 are neutral, one is for male, and one is for female. The proper combination to get either a boy or a girl has long been thought to be purely accidental.

But now psychologists Donald H. Schuster and his wife Locky of Iowa State University claim that a given amount of emotional stress creates an unfavorable physical environment, and some biological mechanism selectively eliminates the sex factors which would create a child of the same sex as the stressed parent.

In other words, the hyper-ambitious father is unlikely to produce a son. And if he should marry an aggressive, equally ambitious wife, the union very probably will not be blessed with offspring at all.

Here is the way stress affects childbirth, according to the test results compiled by the Schusters:

- If neither the father nor the mother are under stress, they could produce a large family of both boys and girls.
- If the father is under mild stress and his wife is not, they are likely to have mostly girls.
- If both father and mother are mildly stressed, they may have one boy, one girl.
- If the father suffers no stress but the mother is mildly stressed, they will have mostly boys.
- If both parents are under more than mild stress, their chances of having children are sharply reduced, in some cases to the vanishing point.

"A man with a determined drive, a burning desire to succeed, or a need to gain ego strength," according to the Schusters, "keeps his body in a mild state of low-level continual anxiety, thus inhibiting the male sex gamete, resulting in the siring of female offspring most frequently."

"Conversely, a woman who wants to climb the social ladder, make a career for herself in a competitive business or profession, etc., is also creating conception problems."

The Schusters initiated their research into this subject by giving a standard psychological test to 95 Los Angeles parents whose family composition was known. Working in reverse, they drew up a set of some 16 personality traits which repeatedly showed up in parents of opposite-sex offspring.

With these traits as guidelines, they then tested a group of graduate students at Iowa State, all of whom were married and had children. The researchers were unaware of the sex of the offspring in this group. The Schusters were able to predict with some 73 percent accuracy whether the couples had a majority of male or female children.

In a laboratory experiment, the Schusters tested their theory on rats, getting them upset by confining them in a small-screen funnel one hour a day for a week and then mating them. The sex ratio of the offspring was additional proof to them that they were on the right track.

Whether or not the Schusters have stumbled onto something important will depend upon much more research and study. Their advice to couples for creating healthier emotional climates at home, however, goes far beyond determining the sex of an infant.

Mental stress and excessive professional drive can lead to a destructive breaking point somewhere along the line. So what they are saying is to relax a little and get more out of life—perhaps a boy, perhaps a girl. Or maybe even both! *

Heart Transplants

Their

32,000 Americans a year
solutions to many

THERE ARE patients like Will Gray in every hospital in every city in the world. His heart was so diseased that he couldn't speak and could barely breathe.

He needed oxygen constantly and was extremely emaciated. In fact, while the doctors were preparing him for surgery, Will didn't have enough breath to whisper.

Six months, a year, nearly two years—anything which could give

Will this much more life, and a fairly normal life at that—must be considered a success. And this is the hope heart-transplantation surgery holds out to Will and many others.

Only a few years ago there were those whose hearts, like Will's, were damaged far beyond anything medical science could cope with. These sufferers, with nothing to lose, welcomed the hope of a heart transplantation—in fact, only for these advanced cases is such a procedure even suggested. Amazingly, of nearly 150 such victims of heart disease who have had transplantation, 20 survived a year or longer. This included 13 persons still alive on Jan. 1 of this year.

What is significant is not that the highly publicized Philip Blaiberg lived only slightly less than two years after a heart transplant, but that he was able to live a relatively normal existence.

Seemingly doomed to a short bedridden existence, Blaiberg was able to undergo this surgery and, with some effort, become fairly active, swim, and even travel. He lectured on his experience and wrote a book. His operation was performed in January, 1968—just a month after the first two transplants were performed! Much has been learned since, and there are guarded hopes for longer lasting successes.

The transplant itself is actually less complicated than many other forms of open-heart surgery. The first steps of a heart-transplant operation are not unlike preparing a pumpkin for Halloween—except, of course, that it's a deadly serious business, for a human life is literally in the surgeon's hands.

The diseased bottom three-quarters of the patient's heart is removed, leaving the stem intact with all its connections to the major blood vessels of the body. The donor's heart is then attached. The insertion of the new heart is generally successful—the organ starts beating immediately and supplies blood to the body. Then the patient is placed under intensive care. Other biological factors, however, may limit the degree of his recovery as well as the length of his survival.

The surgery is well perfected, and most competent heart surgeons can perform it. But long-range successes will be made possible only by other specialists, such as immunologists.

Surprisingly, one possible source of help also may be the psychiatrist. Dr. Aaron Paley, chief of the department of psychiatry at Denver's National Jewish Hospital, joined with two psychologists in a team which found convincing evidence that one element in the success of heart surgery is the "personality structure" of the patient. The team was able to predict accurately in 24 out of 27 cases whether the patient would survive. As they put it: "... the prediction equation was disturbingly accurate."

In this study, Dr. Paley and his team interviewed each patient twice before he underwent surgery. Part of these two sessions was devoted to simply talking—but specialists can learn a great deal about an individual from this technique. In addition, psychological tests were used as well as special intelligence tests.

Problems and Their Promise could benefit from such radical surgery—but not until science finds the perplexing problems

By Dr. ARTHUR S. FREESE

All the information, including the patient's age and specific physical and health data, added up to some 50 different factors, which were then put through a computer to find their relationship to one another. The team discovered that the more mature patients and those better able to cope with anxiety and stress had a better chance of survival.

The patients involved were not heart-transplant cases, however, but there is no reason at all to think there will be significant differences between them and Dr. Paley's subjects, who underwent both open- and closed-heart surgery.

These findings show that there are more than physical problems involved in the survival of these patients, and cardiac surgeons may, before long, routinely request psychological tests before surgery.

Dr. Paley explains that his team had zeroed in on a new facet of heart surgery. He adds that they have a method which, "if it proves out, may provide a very valuable tool and may prevent failures—even explain failures we don't understand on a physical basis."

The brain is also involved in the success of transplants. Dr. Reginald Bickford, professor of neurosciences at the University of California, has described the brain as the "organ of personality, the body's most sensitive organ." He believes that here is where the scientists must look for evidence of the exact moment of death. This is important in deciding when surgeons can legally and ethically transfer the heart from the donor. Transplants have created new definitions of death, one of which says that the brain activity ceases although the heart may be still beating.

Dr. Bickford devised a small analog computer which, attached by electrodes to the scalp, will "tick" as long as the living brain waves continue. When the clicking stops, brain activity will have ended and death occurred. In this way, a donated heart can be taken for transplantation before deterioration has had a chance to set in.

In some cases, however, the heart itself may generate electrical impulses of its own to confuse the computer. In these cases, a larger computer must be coupled to Bickford's. The larger one is so programmed that it can "subtract" any spurious signals and show only those emanating from the brain.

The scientist foresees the possibility of a day when these larger computers will be set up at key points throughout the nation and information fed into them through telephone lines from the area's hospitals. Final decision of the moment of death will then be centrally controlled.

One of the major difficulties in heart transplants has been getting the right donor and the right recipient in the same place at the same time, for at this time most surgeons will not use a heart more than an hour after the donor's death. A new portable unit has been developed; in it, animal hearts have been safely preserved for more than 14 hours. This would make possible, for example, the use of a donor heart from a person who died in Los Angeles, for someone in Washington, D.C.

At Tulane University, Dr. Terence H. Williams, professor of neuroanatomy, also has turned to animals to learn more about heart transplants. He has found that heart valves are not just passive doors which open and close according to the pressure of the blood. On the contrary, they contain nerves which communicate with the brain.

hour after the donor's death. A new portable unit has been developed; in it, animal hearts have been safely preserved for more than 14 hours. This would make possible, for example, the use of a donor heart from a person who died in Los Angeles, for someone in Washington, D.C.

At Tulane University, Dr. Terence H. Williams, professor of neuroanatomy, also has turned to animals to learn more about heart transplants. He has found that heart valves are not just passive doors which open and close according to the pressure of the blood. On the contrary, they contain nerves which communicate with the brain.

He believes that nerve regeneration may go on very rapidly in transplanted hearts, and this may be of use to the surgeon who performs heart transplants.

Furthermore, evidence from complicated tests on animals indicates that heart-valve nerves act as sensors to measure the blood flow so that the brain can properly regulate the working of the heart.

Another of the major stumbling blocks in this new surgery has been the problem of rejection, the body's system for eliminating foreign material, whether it is microscopic bacteria or transplanted hearts. After the first transplant by Dr. Christiaan Barnard on Louis Washkansky in December, 1967, cobalt irradiation and massive doses of immunosuppressive drugs were used to prevent the natural process of rejection. Washkansky succumbed to pneumonia 18 days later because the post-operative treatment weakened his defenses against infection. The use of irradiation and anti-rejection drugs was stopped.

Irradiation is again being utilized, but of a radically different type. It represents another new hope for long-term success. Instead of irradiating the heart or the whole body, nuclear power has now been pinpointed to knock out the specific cause of rejection.

The chief villain in this drama of the body's rejection is presently believed to be white blood cells, the small lymphocytes. Blood or lymph from either artery or lymph vessel is sidetracked through a plastic tube, which winds around a radiation source (a sort of miniature atomic pile) before it carries those body fluids back to a vein.

The latest suggestion has been to use a simple plastic bracelet which would contain the radiation source; thus the flow could be continued as long as necessary, destroying the small lymphocytes which are especially sensitive to radiation—all without anything more elaborate than having the patient wear a bracelet and a small plastic tube.

The immunosuppressive drugs that have been used to control rejection have been steadily improved, and new ones are being steadily developed. The aim is to control the rejection mechanism without weakening the patient's resistance to infection. Tissue-matching also reduces the likelihood of rejection (the first successful kidney transplant was between identical twins with their perfectly similar tissues). In heart transplantation, a dozen or more factors are now checked for similarity, and these are being increased nearly every month.

Houston's Dr. Denton A. Cooley, world-famous heart-transplant surgeon, has been the only doctor to try an artificial heart in a human being. The use of this device has been professionally questioned, and its use for terminal sufferers like Will Gray is still a matter of doubt. It may be a way of tiding the person over until a transplant is ready, but many problems are involved—clot formation, lack of a reliable long-term power source, and others.

Dr. Cooley summed up transplants in this way: "The initial experience with cardiac transplantation has been encouraging. In fact, nothing has been encountered which was not anticipated from the outset. The remarkable prolongation of life and restoration of good cardiac output has been most encouraging and somewhat beyond expectation."

In the future, the challenge remains with the prevention of rejection. Once this and other obstacles are overcome by the immunologists, then cardiac transplantation will hold greater promise."

In short, it's likely that in the foreseeable future heart transplants will spell "life" to innumerable suffering human beings—but not without first overcoming some major obstacles, both inside and out of the operating room.

A review of heart transplants released by the National Heart and Lung Institute observes that some 32,000 Americans under 65 could benefit annually from transplants—but only 22,000 hearts are likely to be available each year. Further experiments with animal and artificial hearts will have to be undertaken, and the possibility of strategically located "organ banks" around the country may have to be explored.

Obviously the road ahead is a complex one; but the journey has had a hopeful beginning. ♦

JON VOIGHT SAYS:

"I'd Like to Remain an Unknown"

This potential Oscar winner wants to stay out of the limelight—but it's too late now!

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

I NEVER MET anyone more afraid of success than Jon Voight, whose title role in "Midnight Cowboy" might well earn him an Academy Award on April 6.

"He is so nervous about publicity that he would prefer not to get his name into print at all," said a United Artists' publicist, who nevertheless talked Jon into having breakfast with me at the Dorchester Hotel in London. Jon was in England to dub his latest film, "The Revolutionary."

Jon showed up at the hotel 10 minutes early—somewhat of a first for an actor who has received so much attention. He insisted that the publicist who introduced us leave us to ourselves. He felt more at ease that way, he explained.

As he put it, "I don't want to be surrounded by an atmosphere that encourages me to take myself seriously. Acting is fun for me. That part is good and healthy. But right now I am aware—maybe overly aware—of how even one film success can distort a person's values."

Jon is certainly not going to change his set of values if he can help it. That is evident in the way he talks, dresses (neat but indifferently), and most of all lives his private life.

In London, for instance, instead of staying in the fashionable West End he got a room in a small place opposite an air terminal which most American tourists would have turned down as much too unimpressive.

In New York, he has a one-room apartment in a low-rent district on the West Side. At this stage of his life, creature comforts simply don't seem to mean much to Jon.

My first impression of Jon was that he is an intelligent, literate, and highly sensitive person who is deeply involved in all that is going on today and who would much rather talk about politics, Vietnam, and social conditions than himself. He avoided no question and asked that his answers be off the record only when they involved some contractual matters or criticisms of a couple of associates.

The latter certainly did not include John Schlesinger, the director of "Midnight Cowboy," for whom Jon has the highest regard. Schlesinger at first rejected Jon, who auditioned for both of the leads in the film. In fact, Voight got the part of Joe Buck as a result of a mistake made by the projectionist.

Schlesinger had tested a good many actors for the part of the Texas hustler who tries selling himself to rich women. Among those rejected from the very beginning was Jon. At the time, Michael Sarrazin was first choice, but his agents wanted more money than Schlesinger was willing to pay.

While the bickering went on, the British director decided to take another look at half a dozen of the more hopefuls he had tested before. Jon was not among them.

Fortunately for the young actor, the projectionist showed Jon's test again by mistake. This time Schlesinger was impressed and asked Jon for another audition. As a result, the actor Schlesinger had so readily rejected before got the part.

"Unlike anything else I have done before and since, I felt that I absolutely had to play Joe Buck, that I was the only actor really qualified to do it," Jon told me.

This statement might have been out-of-character with my impression of Jon if it hadn't been said with such sincerity. It was simply an honest self-appraisal of a man who insists he is more critical of himself than most actors he knows.

Jennifer Salt is Jon's girl friend on screen and in private life.

In spite of all the attention he has received in the past few months, 30-year-old Yonkers-born Jon Voight is no "instant success." He had had nine years of stock, television, and small movie roles before he portrayed Joe Buck.

Jon, whose father is a golf pro and who himself earned his first pocket money caddying for his father at age eight, did not grow up with visions of becoming an actor.

He graduated from the Catholic University of America with a degree in fine arts. "I was set on stage design as a profession. I also felt I had a strong talent for painting. But somehow at the back of my mind I must have wanted to become an actor, although I didn't want to admit it."

At school Jon showed a pronounced feeling for literature and philosophy as well as a keen sense of self-criticism which dismissed anything that seemed too dogmatic and too pretentious to him. "I always enjoyed digging for logic at the heart of things. I believe this paid off when I became an actor."

After a brief spell in summer stock, Jon spent a year with drama coach Joss Shelley in New York.

"At this time I was so heavily involved with a girl that I was much too busy and preoccupied for such mundane things as learning lines. Moreover, when I played Happy in 'Death of a Salesman' I almost fainted on the stage with tension."

"No wonder the notices about me stated that I could neither walk nor talk! And the rest of the season was worse! After this, when I went back to New York for a small part in 'The Sound of Music,' I was a total wreck. After all, I had just proved to myself that I knew nothing about acting."

Jon feels that he got his hard core experience "working for television people who were always very good to me when I was broke and needed to work. That is why I will always try to come back for a show if they ask me."

Following the tremendous success of "Cowboy," Jon was swamped with offers for roles, almost all of them for more money than he got for "The Revolutionary." He accepted the film not so much because he liked the script but out of a feeling of obligation to director Paul Williams and producer Edward Pressman, who had given him his first important role in "Out of It."

"It was a good part, but, unlike that of Joe Buck, it could have been played by any number of actors as well," Jon explained quietly.

The female lead was played by Jennifer Salt, who readily confesses that she developed "a huge crush" on Jon Voight after first seeing him on television in "The Dwarfs." In "Midnight Cowboy," Jennifer played his early girl friend. And in private life she has been Jon's girl for over a year, with odds heavily in favor of her becoming Mrs. Voight.

Jennifer—who also likes to keep out of the limelight—shares Jon's point of view of working for the enjoyment of it and not for the sake of publicity or even money. As Jon put it as he left, "I would love to go on making movies without anyone knowing who I am." *

Are You Getting the Most Out of Life?

If not, science has some advice, ranging from love to well-fitted shoes.

YOU'LL GET more out of life if you look and feel your best—and researchers have recently made some intriguing discoveries which can help. Let's take a look at their findings in this quiz.

1. You should always force yourself to take exercise.
2. You'll stay younger longer if you get plenty of sunshine.
3. A meal that you enjoy will do you more good than one eaten just because "it's good for you."
4. Too much sleep can be dangerous.
5. It's simply impossible to feel fit if your shoes don't.
6. You should stop worrying.
7. If you want to get more out of life, you should concentrate your efforts on achieving only personal goals you feel will make you happy.
8. As long as you feel unlucky, you'll be unlucky.

ANSWERS

1. False. While exercise is an important factor in keeping youthful and maintaining physical fitness, the exercise should be pleasurable. Dr. Thomas Hodge McGavack, lecturer at George Washington University, has made a study of the dynamics of exercise and finds that if it is done under pressure, it is usually worthless.

2. False. Studies at the University of Miami school of medicine have shown that exposure to the sun does more than the aging process itself to produce the skin conditions associated with growing old. Light blondes are most subject to the ravages of too much sun exposure; dark brunettes are the least vulnerable.

3. True. Unless you have some specific dietary problem, a meal you really enjoy and take pleasure in eating will do you more good in terms of a general feeling of well-being than food eaten just because "it's good for you."

4. True. Medical statistician E. Cuyler Hammond analyzed the records of 800,000 Americans over a six-year period. It was found that persons who averaged nine or 10 hours of sleep were far more subject to heart disease or stroke than sleepers averaging seven hours a night. On the other hand, psychological studies have shown that many people suffering from psychosomatic ailments are ill because they fail to get enough sleep—and recover within a short time when they are induced to get an adequate amount.

5. True. On this point, Dr. Rene Gailliet, clinical professor of medicine at the University of Southern California's school of medicine, points out that your feet don't stay the same size all day. They tend to get bigger as the day gets longer because standing and walking cause the ligaments to relax. Therefore, he advises, buy shoes in the afternoon when your feet have expanded to their maximum if you want to avoid the unhappy disposition which goes hand-in-hand with unhappy feet.

6. False. It's perfectly natural to worry whenever you're faced with real dangers and threats. As one leading psychiatrist has observed, to remain unworried in threatening or hazardous situations is often a sign of mental disturbance. However, "free-floating" anxiety or worry about vague and fanciful dangers which have little likelihood of occurring is a habit which should be broken.

7. False. Psychological studies have demonstrated that a self-centered attitude has a negative and inhibiting effect on the personality and sharply diminishes the capacity for pleasure and enjoyment. The best way to get more out of life is to give more. And people who share in the hopes and disappointments of others—people who give of themselves—get the most out of life.

8. True. Studies at the University of Santa Clara have also shown that a person's attitude and general outlook determine to a very large extent the degree to which his efforts are crowned with luck or good fortune. So if you haven't been getting the breaks lately, take science's word for it—you can change your luck by changing your mental attitude.

Down to the Beach in Dune Buggies

By NORMAN SKLAREWITZ

IF YOU THINK you're too old for a hot rod, but too young for a rocking chair, maybe what you need is a "dune buggy."

These odd-looking little cars are the hottest things on wheels—but on the beach, not the highway. That's because they're designed to chug around on sandy stretches only.

Almost any weekend, thousands of dune-buggy fans take to the sand, from the great dunes of the Arizona-California border, to the flatlands outside of Salt Lake City, and from the beaches of Florida up to Cape Cod in New England during the summer months. In Hawaii, they're painted wildly and called "love buggies."

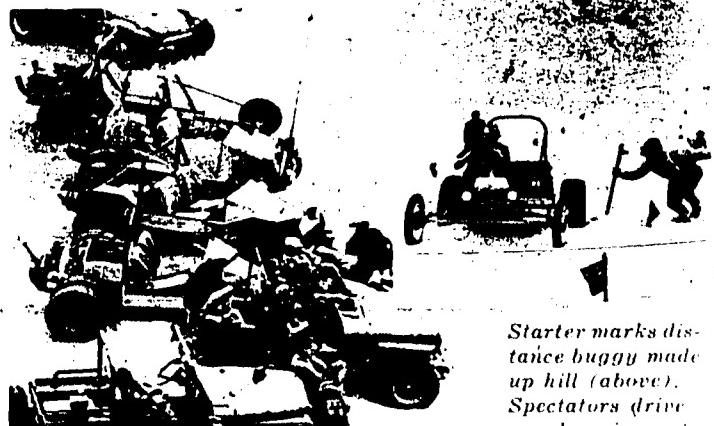

Old-timers will snort that there's nothing really new about dune buggies. And they're partially right. For years, fishermen and hunters have taken old cars, lowered the tire pressure to get traction on sand and gravel, and driven off paved roads to find the best grounds. The dune buggy is really a super model-T Ford—and then some.

Success of the dune buggy (price, $400 to $3,000) was probably inspired by the popularity of the Volkswagen in the U.S. These little cars have their engines in the rear instead of the front. And this placement of the weight over the rear axle means the car has the ability to develop better traction—that is, to get a grip on such slippery surfaces as sand and push itself up steep inclines.

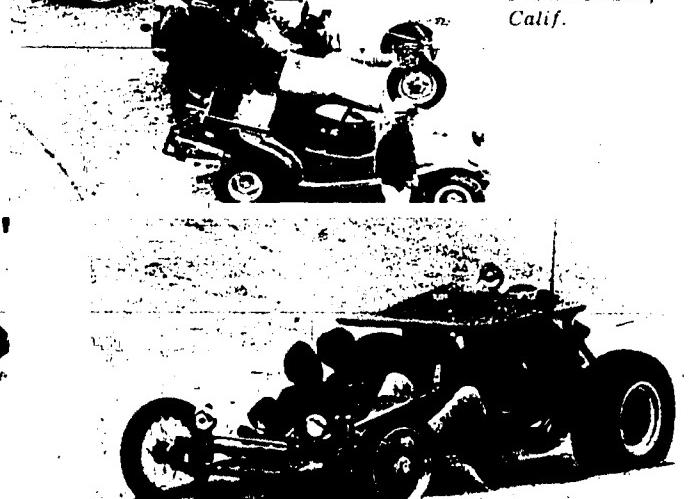

Standard tires are replaced with all sorts of oversized rear tires to gain greater grabbing power in the sand. When in action, air pressure is reduced to about two pounds. Result is that the vehicle rides atop the sand instead of sinking down.

And, of course, wherever two or more vehicles gather, there's bound to be a race of some kind. But the dune-buggy variety generally turns out to be a combination competition and family picnic since kids and grownups alike find dune-buggy driving a groovy way to scoot on sand. *

A Casual Springtime Luncheon

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ Spring seems to bring with it a magical charm that awakens our over-tired taste buds. It excites a lively desire for little luxuries such as the fresh asparagus and tender young rhubarb now appearing in most markets—each included is a special recipe for each.

Spring-Green Soup

2 medium-sized cucumbers, pared and cut in pieces
 1 small onion, quartered
 2 teaspoons parsley
 2 chicken bouillon cubes
 1 teaspoon lemon juice
 1/4 teaspoon dill weed
 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
 2 tablespoons flour
 1 1/2 cups warm water
 1 cup light cream
 1 or 2 drops green food coloring
 Seasoned salt

- Put into a blender container cucumber, onion, parsley, bouillon cubes, lemon juice, dill weed, butter or margarine, and flour; blend until puréed. Gradually add one half of the water and continue blending.
- Empty one half the contents of container into a saucepan. Continue blending while adding remainder of water; empty into the saucepan. Stirring occasionally, bring to boiling and cook 2 min. Stir in the cream. Heat or chill thoroughly before serving.
- Tint a pale green by blending in the food coloring. Mix in seasoned salt to taste.
- Set small mugs or cups on a serving tray. Ladle hot soup into each. Or ladle cold soup into small clear glasses. Accompany with assorted crackers. About 2 1/2 cups soup

Fresh Asparagus with Lemon Sauce

How to Cook Fresh Asparagus
 Break off and discard lower parts of stalks from desired amount of fresh asparagus as far down as they will snap. If necessary, remove scales to dislodge any sand. Wash the spears thoroughly. Cook 5 min. in an uncovered skillet containing boiling salted water to a depth of 1 in. Cover and cook until just tender, 5 to 10 min.; drain.

To Serve Buffet Style

Line up drained asparagus spears parallel to ends of a heated oval platter; accompany with serving tongs. Set on the buffet with the Cooked Lemon Sauce (see recipe) and a pepper mill. The sauce will keep hot throughout serving if it is in a heat-resistant bowl set on a candle warmer. If desired, guests may grind pepper over the sauced asparagus.

Greek-Style Lamb and Olive Salad

Prepare an assortment of hot rolls using available refrigerated fresh doughs.

Greek-Style Salad Dressing (See recipe)

1 1/2 lbs. roast lamb, trimmed of fat and cut in strips (see note)
 1 large cucumber, pared and sliced
 1 medium-sized tomatoes, sliced and quartered
 1 cup pitted ripe olives
 Curly endive

- Pour the dressing over lamb in a bowl and marinate, covered, in refrigerator at least 1 hr., or until thoroughly chilled.
- Before serving, toss cucumber, tomatoes, and olives with some of the dressing and turn onto a bed of curly endive in a large salad bowl. Spoon meat over vegetables and pour more dressing over all. 6 servings Plan luncheon around this Greek-style salad, featuring lamb and ripe olives.

Note: To roast lamb, set a leg of lamb on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Roast in a 325°F. oven until a meat thermometer registers 175°F.

Greek-Style Salad Dressing

1/2 cup olive oil or all-purpose oil
 1 cup red wine vinegar
 3 to 4 tablespoons honey
 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 1/8 teaspoon dry mustard
 2 teaspoons crushed dried mint leaves
 1/4 teaspoon crushed oregano
 1/4 teaspoon crushed thyme
 1/4 teaspoon anise seed

Mix together the oil, vinegar, honey, and a blend of remaining ingredients. About 2 cups dressing

Cooked Lemon Sauce

This satiny smooth sauce, hot or cold, is a superb complement to vegetables and fish. With the addition of various herbs, this elegant sauce can be the basis of many more.

2 eggs
 2 egg yolks
 3 tablespoons lemon juice
 2 wide strips of thinly sliced lemon peel (do not cut into white)
 1 chicken bouillon cube
 1/4 cup warm water

- Put eggs, egg yolks, lemon juice and peel, and bouillon cube into an electric blender container; cover and turn motor on low. Add the water gradually while blending. 4

2. Empty container into a double boiler top and set over simmering water; stirring constantly, cook until sauce is thickened and coats a spoon (about 7 min.).

About 1 1/2 cups sauce

Rosy Rhubarb Pie

Pastry for a 2-crust 9-in. pie (prepared from your favorite pie crust mix)
 1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
 6 cups 1-in. fresh rhubarb pieces
 1/4 cup grenadine
 1 1/4 cups sugar
 1/2 cup flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon grated orange peel

1. Prepare pastry and fit lower crust into pie pan. Sprinkle tapioca over bottom of pie shell; set aside.

2. Toss rhubarb with grenadine, then with a mixture of sugar, flour, salt, and orange peel; turn into pie shell, heaping slightly in center. Dot with butter or margarine.

3. Moisten edge of bottom crust with water for a tight seal. Cut a decorative design in top crust and carefully lay over filling. Seal edges and flute.

4. Brush top lightly with egg white; sprinkle with 2 teaspoons sugar.
 5. Bake at 450°F. 15 min.; turn oven control to 375°F. and bake 20 to 25 min., or until golden brown. Cool on a wire rack. One 9-in. pie

Panty Pair vs Pantyhose.

To put it simply, Hanes' Panty Pair® is pantyhose taken a step further.

If one leg goes, you don't have to throw the whole thing out.

It doesn't bag. It doesn't sag. It doesn't bunch up. It doesn't slide down.

All this without a garter or snap or bump to spoil the smooth line from waist to toe. And without having to haul on a girdle to keep your pantyhose up.

Panty Pair comes in two parts: A two-way stretch panty with a gentle touch of control. Plus a pair of replaceable Cantrece® II stockings.

Putting on Panty Pair is simplicity itself. You slip on the stockings. Ease on the panty. Adjust the panty legs to just the height you want. And that's it. The stockings stay up because the panty's flat cuffs automatically grip the tops of the stockings—without putting any pressure on your thighs.

At $5 complete, Panty Pair costs a little bit more than pantyhose to begin with. But at $1 a leg for replacement stockings, it ends up costing you far less in the long run.

For women with more to control, there's also a Panty Pair with more control: Panty Pair Plus.™ Either way, you get a perfect fit that stays that way without constant tugging and smoothing and fidgeting.

Won't that be refreshing after some of the pantyhose you've tried?

*Suggested retail price. Panty Pair—a detachable panty hose—patent pending.

I stopped crash dieting and lost 70 pounds.

By Farley Heward—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

ILIVE in a hotel. Alone. And I can't tell you how many times I used to call on the help to zip up my dresses. My problem, of course, was my weight. I'm only a little over five feet one inch tall, yet, at one point, I weighed as much as 198 pounds. Most of this I carried in my upper arms and from my waist down. When I walked, I waddled. Was I ever fat! A big reason, I think, why my marriage broke up.

As long as I can remember, I've had to fight fat. Once, I recall, a friend of mine sent me a snapshot, showing herself, her brother and me. I was so disgusted with it that I took a pair of scissors, cut me out of the middle, glued the two pieces together, and sent it back to her. She was furious.

Perhaps one reason for my weight problem was that I've always been a good cook. When my husband married me, I was fairly thin. But when he left me, I was fat. He really went for my cooking. In the beginning, he used to want me to put on weight. "I don't want anybody else to look at you," he'd say. And I believed him. But in the end, he didn't want to look at me, either. So we were divorced.

After that, I crash-dieted. I think I've been on every diet ever invented. The banana-and-milk diet. The grapefruit diet. The low-carbohydrate diet. The cottage cheese diet. The liquid diets. I can't remember which one I tried at the time, ~~but~~ whichever it was, it worked. Temporarily. At least, I lost enough weight to satisfy me for a while. But only a short while. As soon as I went back to my regular way of eating, I began to gain. My appetite was enormous. Pancakes, French toast, spicy Italian foods, baked beans, ice cream, candy—I ate anything that was good. And fattening. In about one-eighth the time it had taken me to lose the weight, I had put it all back on again.

It wasn't a very good example to set for my daughter, I must admit. But I guess I didn't give it much thought at the time. As a result, she learned young what it's like to struggle with the scale.

The years rolled on, and eventually, I came to Buffalo, New York, to work in a very large beauty salon. I'm a hairdresser and wigger, by profession. At the shop, the wig ovens are on the second floor. And each time I had to climb those stairs, I really puffed. Everybody knew when Farley was going to shrink a wig. Too bad I couldn't shrink myself.

Finally, my weight began to affect my health. My blood pressure was high. And headaches were frequent. I'm ashamed to say, however, that it was not until I had to spend ten dollars on alterations of a size 22½ dress that I decided I had to do something about my weight. But what? I'd already tried diet fads, gimmicks and reducing pills, and all I did was go down and up and down and up the scale.

One day, during a break at the beauty parlor, I picked up a magazine and saw the story of the woman who'd lost close to one hundred pounds with the help of a little vitamin and mineral reducing plan candy. It was called Ayds. And it contained no harmful drugs.

I thought if she could do it, maybe I could, too. So, on the way home, I bought a box of Ayds at the drugstore. The chocolate fudge-type, though I've since tried the vanilla-caramel and the new chocolate mint ones.

How did I take them? Before meals with a hot drink, just as the directions say. And I didn't have to make any special meals. Fact is, I don't have any cooking facilities at the hotel, so I eat out. In the morning, I'd have my Ayds and coffee in my room, then go down and have juice, two eggs, toast with a pat of butter, and more coffee. At noon, I wouldn't be very hungry. But I'd have another Ayds with coffee, and maybe a cup of soup and a sandwich. And for dinner, after still another Ayds, I'd order a regular meal. Often I wouldn't even feel like dessert. That was the great thing about the Ayds Plan. I really felt like eating less. I'd found something, at last, to help me cut back my appetite. If I did get the urge to eat between meals, there were always more Ayds. They taste just like ordinary candy, so they satisfied my craving for sweets.

Soon, the weight began to come off. Pound after pound. I weighed myself daily in the five-and-ten across the street, so I know. I've got to admit that I also did some isometrics to help tighten up the muscles. But they're easy!

I realized, suddenly, the stairs were easier to climb. The headaches were less frequent. And my clothes were getting big. By the time I'd lost seventy pounds, nothing fit. But I felt great.

I lost so much weight in the thighs and legs that I can now wear medium-length stockings, instead of extra-long ones. Even my shoe size has gone from 8½ D to 7 C. You should see me scurry up to the wig ovens these days.

One thing more that makes me feel good. When I was heavy, and friends used to introduce me to a man, everything would go along fine—while I was sitting down. But the minute I stood up, that was the end. Today, thanks to Ayds, I'm as popular standing as sitting. Who knows? I may even marry again.

Too bad you can't see how big my legs were here. They were some sight. But I never wanted to keep snapshots like that around.

Now look at me! at 128 pounds. My thighs and legs still aren't as small as I'd like, but at least I'm able to raise my hemline to a more fashionable length.
